Green Supports Strike In Textiles as Garment Trade Wins Hour Cut

RFC Allocates 250 Millions for Loans

Board Drafts Statement Inviting Negotiation for Settlement.

By Leon Dure, Jr.

President William Green yesterday threw the full weight of the American Federation of Labor behind the threatened strike of 300,000 cotton textile workers, called for September 1 or earlier by the United Textile Workers of America.

As the scene shifted to Washington, rapidly heading up to a general showdown on or before that date, other developments were:

President Roosevelt ordered into effect shorter hours and a corresponding increase in hourly wage rates for some 200,000 workers in the cotton garment industry, not directly involved in the strike.

The Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board, meeting under chairmanship of Robert W. Bruere, drew up, but did not make public, a statement understood to invite negotiations.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, announced the allocation of $250,000,000 to care for loans on cotton in the hands of producers, in accordance with the President's action the day before in setting 12 cents as the bottom price for cotton.

Federation Aid Pledged.

Emerging from a conference with officials of the United Textile Workers, Mr. Green declared the American Federation of Labor will cooperate fully "in the execution of such strike plans and policies as the textile officers may adopt."

The cotton textile strike, subject to call on 12 hours' notice, was voted by the union August 16. Similar action, conditioned on the cotton workers' strike, was taken the next day in regard to the woolen, silk and rayon industries, involving 300,000 more workers.

In a statement, Mr. Green said that those attending the conference "considered the economic situation prevailing in the cotton textile industry, the grievances about which the workers complain and the urgent necessity of dealing with the very serious problem of unemployment through the application of a shorter work day and shorter work week."

Emphasizing his concurrence in strike plans, he designated a number of representatives of organizations affiliated with the American

Cuba Nips Plot, Seizes Rebels

Alleged Leader Killed, Many Conspirators Arrested.

Havana, Aug. 22 (AP).—Moving swiftly, Col. Fulgencio Batista's loyal little army today smashed plotters who had picked September 4, the anniversary of Batista's meteor-like rise to power, to overturn the government.

With one allegel leader of the conspiracy dead and others held for court-martial, army headquarters was prepared to announce the plot definitely broken.

Lieut. Col. Mario Hernandez, military commander of Pinar Del Rio Province and long-time bulwark of Batista's power, was killed in an automobile accident as soldiers brought him to Havana. Earlier he had been shot and wounded when he resisted arrest at his home.

Maj. Angel Echevarria, another alleged chief conspirator, was behind bars, as were numbers of lesser conspirators.

British Book on 'Boom' Causes Stocks Flurry

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

New York, Aug. 22.—An incipient stock market boom has been launched in the last two days apparently as the result of the publication of a brochure written by a little known British broker, Lawrence L. B. Angas, predicting "The Coming American Boom."

At all events, the Angas pamphlet is being discussed in every quarter of Wall street, and no other plausible explanation has been offered for the sudden shift of New York Stock Exchange trading from the dullest days in 12 years on Monday to a brisk turnover of 1,291,410 shares today.

Price advances were general, with a number of leading issues showing rises of from $1 to $3 a share today, a repetition of what happened yesterday. It was noteworthy that some of the most substantial increases in prices took place in stocks of the type which Maj. Angas recommended to buy at this time.

Maj. Angas's thesis, in which he contends that the Roosevelt monetary policies have been in the right direction and should now start bearing fruit in increased prices, has been sharply attacked as fallacious by the New York financial writers and others, including James P. Warburg, financial adviser to the American delegation to the London Economic and Monetary Conference.

In pointing to the Angas pamphlet as contributing to the sudden improvement in the stock market some writers described it as "summer reading" and other scoffing comment. Nevertheless, in view of what happened today on the market, it appeared that there were some who took the Briton seriously—producing what might become the strangest financial phenomenon of the times.

There are some who are skeptical of the contention that there is any relation between the elongated $1.50 pamphlet written by the retired British major—now writer of brochures for a London brokerage

Co-ed Found Slain in Ditch; 2 Questioned

Hunt by Hundreds Yields Body of Alabama Girl, 19, Her Throat Cut.

Birmingham, Ala., Aug. 22 (AP).—The body of Faye New, 19-year-old Howard College coed, was found today by volunteer searchers a little more than a mile from the spot where Harold Taylor, her escort on an automobile ride Monday night, said she left his automobile after a quarrel.

Officers said the girl had been dead more than 24 hours. Her throat had been slashed.

Taylor had been held for questioning since yesterday.

"I didn't do it," Police Chief Luther Hollums quoted him as saying when detectives informed him Miss New had been found slain.

The coed went for a ride with Taylor, whom she had met a few minutes before when he came to repair a punctured tire on a friend's automobile.

She failed to return from the ride with Taylor, who said she jumped from his automobile after an altercation and ran into the woods.

Hundreds Joined Search.

Hundreds of neighbors joined police and 200 Boy Scouts in the search for the girl after her mother, Mrs. Lon New, said she thought her daughter was dead.

The body was found by R. L. Carlisle, a volunteer searcher, and George L. Simcox, Boy Scout executive. It was face up in a ditch, and was in an area which had been searched carefully time and again during the 24-hour hunt.

Police Chief Hollums, who directed the search and the questioning of Taylor and A. B. Cain, Miss New's frequent companion at social gatherings at her home in suburban Woodlawn, was accom-

The aviators were Jean La Rene and Mary Owens. They had taken off from Curtiss Reynolds Airport at 2:36 p. m. today. They planned to try again tomorrow.

Askew Seized; Kidnap Tale Proves False

Attempted Extortion Laid to Cleric for Note Demanding Money.

Goldsboro, N. C., Aug. 22 (AP).—The Rev. R. H. Askew, Four Square Gospel evangelist, who disappeared for five days last week, was charged with attempted extortion today after Sheriff Paul Garrison said he admitted his story of having been kidnaped was a fake.

U. S. Commissioner Leon Pearson issued a Federal warrant against Askew, in which the 28-year-old minister was accused of having sent his 50-year-old wife a letter and telegram demanding $25,000 ransom.

A similar demand was received last week by authorities of Angelus Temple at Los Angeles, of which Aimee Semple McPherson is the leader.

The complaint was filed by C. H. Whitten, special agent of the Department of Justice, who has been investigating the case.

Askew disappeared after leaving Goldsboro August 13 and turned up four days later in Nashville, Tenn., where he told police he had been "carried all over the country" by three men in an automobile.

Then he come home and went to bed on the order of his physician, who permitted the questioning today.

After officers had spent several hours with the evangelist, they emerged to say Askew had admitted he faked the entire proceedings.

Sheriff Garrison said the preacher admitted mailing his wife a typewritten note demanding $25,000 in exchange for Askew's life. The sheriff said the evangelist also admitted demanding a like sum from the Los Angeles evangelist to prevent Angelus Temple from being bombed.

Capone Resentful at Transfer To American "Devils Island"

Atlanta, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Al Capone is deeply resentful toward the Federal Government for having removed him from Atlanta Penitentiary to Alcatraz Prison, in San Francisco Bay.

Frank A. Doughman, Capone's attorney here, said he was certain his client was among the 43 prisoners who reached the island prison by transcontinental train today.

Doughman was informed, he said, that Capone took the transfer "mighty seriously."

"He complained," the lawyer said, "that his good prison record did not merit his being classed with the dangerous type of prisoner destined for Alcatraz. He reminded prison officials that he had never been disciplined.

"This prison transfer is shockingly unfair to a man who has made a perfect prison record and obeyed all the rules."

San Francisco, Aug. 22. (U.P.).—Al Capone, mightiest gang leader in the prohibition era, was behind the walls of Alcatraz Island Prison tonight after his arrival here, with 42 "dangerous" prisoners aboard a transcontinental train.

Traveling in six cars, under heavy guard and with all windows barred, the prisoners reached San Francisco from Atlanta and were taken at once aboard a rail car ferry to the American "Devil's Island."

Aluminum Peace Plan Is Rejected

250 Million Firm Shuns Check-Off, Closed-Shop Arbitration.

Negotiator Returns to Capital to Confer With Perkins.

Pittsburgh, Aug. 22 (AP).—The $250,000,000 Aluminum Company of America today flatly rejected peace proposals of the Federal Department of Labor, which had sought an agreement to arbitrate differences between the concern and its employes that have thrown 8,500 out of work.

"Demands of the American Federation of Labor for a closed shop; the check-off for collection of dues; a universal wage rate and a signed agreement with the union committee are not proper matters for arbitration," was the reply of Roy A. Hunt, president.

He added the company recognizes and accepts the principle of collective bargaining as provided for in section 7 (a) of the NIRA, and "is at all times willing to meet any of its employes or representatives of its employes" with a hope for a satisfactory understanding.

Has Five-Point Peace Program.

Fred Keightly, special agent of the Department of Labor, submitted a five-point peace program on Monday that would have made the National Labor Relations Board the final judge of all points at issue and would have sent the workers back to their jobs meantime.

The National Council of Aluminum Workers accepted Keightly's plan.

Hunt said his company is willing to reemploy "as far as practicable," all strikers except those who "are responsible in the event of any violence or destruction of property."

On this point, however, he said the company "throughout the depression maintained its operations on a scale above that necessary to meet the demand for its products, and consequently has on hand a stock of metal greatly in excess of requirements * * * and it may be economically unsound to resume some of the operations when the strike is terminated."

Sees Principles Violated.

A suggested universal wage scale, which would eliminate existing differences in the rate of pay in various sections, Hunt said, is contrary to the principles recognized by industry generally, by the United States Government, by NRA in codes, and also by the American Federation of Labor itself.

Keightly returned to Washington tonight with the message and will confer with Secretary Perkins and others regarding the Government's next step. About the letter, he said:

"I don't think you would be far wrong in saying the company makes it plain that it intends to keep its plants closed until it gets ready to reopen them. What our next step will be I can't say. It might be under some section of the code and it might be another way."

The strike was called at midnight April 10. Picket lines since have been maintained at six of the company's plants. Officials say the average monthly pay roll of those out is nearly $1,000,000.

Strikers Attack Truck At Pennsylvania Plant

Columbia, Pa., Aug. 22 (AP).—A crowd at the strike-affected Marietta Silk Co. plant today attacked a silk truck, slashed a deputy sheriff's automobile tires, prevented a plant official and three employes from leaving, and cut telephone wires leading to the building.

State police and sheriff's deputies were sent to the plant.

Blind War Veteran Sentenced as Spy

One of Four Accused by France of Espionage.

Metz, France, Aug. 22 (AP).—Two Germans and two naturalized Frenchmen, among them a blind war veteran, today were convicted of spying on French frontier fortifications.

The blind veteran, J. V. N. Rathke, and Otto Baltes, the other naturalized Frenchman, were sentenced to 18 months' imprisonment. Alois Frischmann, one of the Germans, was given two years, while the other, Jean Rupp, was sentenced to five years by default, not having been apprehended.

The four men were charged not only with spying on French defenses, but subversive activities among German refugees.

Condition of Byrd Shows Improvement

How long it will be before Admiral Byrd will be able to make the 123-mile return journey over the Ross Barrier to Little America remained uncertain.

Hitler Hopes To End Row With Vatican

Enforcement of Church Treaty Would Pacify Catholics.

Sudden Change of Policy Believed Result of Plebiscite.

Berlin, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Reichfuehrer Adolf Hitler is ready to make peace with the Holy See, according to a trustworthy source of information tonight.

The United Press understood that a cabinet meeting late Monday decided to renew efforts soon to effectuate the concordat arranged last year betwen the third Reich and the Vatican, but never put into operation.

Hitler was represented as ready to meet the Pope over half way in the Vatican's demands for maintenance of the independence of the Catholic Youth Organization and other Catholic societies in Germany.

This sudden change in policy was interpreted as his first reaction to Sunday's plebiscite on his seizure of complete power over the destinies of the German people, the vote having showed an especially sharp increase in the "nein" vote in the Catholic west.

Ratified Last Year.

The concordat was ratified last year, but its enforcement has been postponed chiefly by the Reich's reluctance to grant the concessions the Vatican demands.

Hitler's new deal toward the Catholics was more surprising because of the revelation by the official bulletin in Berlin yesterday of a campaign against Christianity in general under the auspices of the Hitler youth movement. A proclamation was issued demanding a final campaign to eradicate Christian teachings from Germany as tinged with Jewish doctrines.

Delay in ratifying the concordat also has been due to the attitude of Baldur von Schirach, Nazi leader in Germany, who insisted that the Catholic youth organization be incorporated in the Hitler youth, while Catholics have demanded that the Hitler youth body be merged with the Catholic organizations.

Von Schirach Will Suffer.

The demands have specifically referred to the Catholic "Arbeiter Verein," or Workers Society, although the latter is chiefly a church organization and must not be confused with the Catholic so-called Christian trade unions.

It is now expected that Von Schirach will be sacrificed and relegated to a less conspicuous party position, to speed ratification of the concordat.

Berlin, Aug. 22 (AP).—The Nazi regime gave signs today that it considers its next big problem the Saar region plebiscite which will determine whether the industrial and mining section is returned to Germany.

"The Watch on the Rhine" became in effect "The Watch on the Saar" as a typical Nazi campaign swung under way.

It will reach a high point during the week-end when Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels will speak in Coblenz at a great demonstration.

Voters for the Plebiscite must be registered before the end of this month, and official announcements have called on all Saarites living in Germany not to forget their duty to register and to remember the "plight" of their brothers at home.

Chancellor Hitler, who will speak later on the subject, may go to Coblenz, where a crowd of 260,000 is expected.

Jewish Parley In '35 Voted

August Next Year Set for Congress; Americans Drop Opposition.

Geneva, Aug. 22 (AP).—The commission for organization of the proposed World Jewish Congress tonight voted unanimously to convoke the congress for August, 1935, at Geneva.

The commission accepted conditions laid down by the American delegates to the effect that election of delegates to the Congress shall be thoroughly democratic.

The commission will report tomorrow to the final plenary session of the World Conference of Jews, meeting here, which will then vote upon issuing formal convocations for the congress.

The Americans had opposed setting the assembly for 1935, demanding assurances that the delegates would not be hand-picked but would be truly representative of all sections of Jewry.

Republicans Gain Votes In Wyoming

Rugged Individualism Back and New Deal Loses, Say Leaders.

Cheyenne, Wyo., Aug. 22 (AP).—A substantial gain in the Republican vote over that of 1932, when normally Republican Wyoming went Democratic by a large majority, was registered in yesterday's State-wide primary.

Marshall S. Reynolds, chairman of the Republican State central committee, heralded the vote as a "return to the usual rugged individualism" of Wyoming.

Other Republicans declared the outcome demonstrated that the Democratic "New Deal" had lost ground in the State.

Democratic campaigners laid the large vote of the Republicans to the number of interesting contests on the opposition ticket.

The State-wide balloting for the two unopposed candidates for Congress gave an indication of how the two parties stacked up.

Former Representative Charles E. Winter, Republican, polled 18,796 votes in 494 out of the State's 660 precincts, while in 401 precincts the vote for Paul R. Greeves, Democrat, was 15,316.

Representative Vincent Carter won the Republican nomination for the United States Senate. Senator J. T. O'Mahoney, filling by appointment the term of the late Senator John B. Kendrick, was unopposed for the Democratic nomination.

Additional returns increased the leads of Gov. Leslie A. Miller, renominated on the Democratic ticket, and A. M. Clark, heading the field in the Republican gubernatorial race.

Gov. Miller, in 435 precincts, had accumulated 13,193 votes to 8,502 for his only opponent, Thomas D. O'Neill. Clark, in 443 precincts, had 9,101 votes to 7,396 for Nels H. Smith, second in a field of four.

Former Representative Dies.

Kansas City, Aug. 22 (AP).—Perl D. Decker, 59, Democratic Representative in Congress from the Fifteenth Missouri District from 1913 to 1919, died in a hospital here today of heart disease. He was an attorney at Joplin, Mo.

25,000 Pay Tribute at Rainey Rites

Roosevelt Leads Throng of Mourners at Illinois Estate.

Carrollton, Ill., Aug. 22 (AP).—President Roosevelt, scores of National and State dignitaries and thousands of plain citizens joined today in an impressive, though simple, farewell to Speaker Henry T. Rainey.

Following brief services, attended by the President, at Walnut Hall, the Rainey country estate on the outskirts of Carrollton, the body was taken to the Carrollton Cemetery and laid to rest beside those of Mr. Rainey's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rainey.

The President arrived from Washington aboard his special train at 3:55 p. m. (Central standard time) and started his return trip to the Capital at 5:34 p. m.

Bishop Conducts Services.

Funeral services, conducted by Bishop John Canler White, of the Episcopal Diocese of Springfield, Ill., were held in the front parlor of the rambling red brick Rainey home.

Only dignitaries, relatives and close personal friends of the family were admitted to the home, but thousands stood on the large lawn.

Estimates of the crowd inside the estate ranged upward from 10,000. Many thousands viewed the body during the four hours it lay in state in the rotunda of the old

Discovery of 5 Islands Reported by Schooner

Springfield, Mass., Aug. 22 (AP).—Discovery of five good-sized islands was reported today in a cablegram received from a local group, now sailing the South Seas in the schooner Yankee.

Capt. Irving Johnson, master of the vessel and leader of the party, told of finding the islands between the Solomon Islands and North Borneo. If the islands are outside the mandated district of other nations, they would probably come into possession of the United States.

Siberian Colonists, Icebound 5 Years, Rescued by Scientists

Moscow, Aug. 22 (AP).—Forty-four Russian colonists, ice-bound for five years on lonely Wrangel Island, in northern Siberian waters, were reached by a group of Soviet scientists on the ice-breaker Krassin on Monday, according to word reaching here today.

Their lonely years of isolation were supposed to have ended last year, when the Cheliuskin sailed for Wrangel Island. But that expedition never was able to land, and on the return voyage the ship got caught in an ice jam and sank, while its 102 passengers were rescued by airplane after months on an ice floe north of the Bering Straits.

Radio messages reaching here described the uncontrollable enthusiasm with which the colonists greeted the relief party. The message added that the manager of the colony, Mineyeff, and his wife Vlasova, had kept up the morale of the colony through their long isolation.

The colonists were in constant radio communication with the mainland during their exile, and received essential food supplies by airplane. Their kerosene and fuel were reported practically exhausted when the Krassin arrived with building materials for new barracks, provisions, and scientific equipment for the men who are playing an important role in the struggle of the U. S. S. R. to open up a northern sea route to commercial travel.

"About Face" Laid To Recovery Chief

President Speeds His Return in Effort to Heal Breach.

Administrator Hugh S. Johnson and other industrial advisers of President Roosevelt, including Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins and Donald R. Richberg, have disagreed so sharply over reorganization of the National Recovery Administration that a show-down on the management of the proposed set-up has been requested of the President, it was learned in authoritative circles last night.

Mr. Roosevelt will arrive in Washington today from Carrollton, Ill., where he attended the funeral of Speaker Henry T. Rainey, and is expected to start negotiations at once to heal the division among his leaders. Originally, the President intended to go directly to his home in Hyde Park, N. Y., from Illinois, but because of the reported rift he decided to return here.

From reliable sources, it was learned the President at a conference Monday with Gen. Johnson and other members of his coordinating industrial committee did not back up the recovery administrator's reorganization program which Gen. Johnson has insisted the other leaders accept.

While Gen. Johnson, as the result, did not actually offer his resignation, he placed himself in an anomalous position where his retirement in the course of a month or so would seem to be in order in the event President Roosevelt finally ruled against him.

Johnson Told He Was Needed.

The reported break between Gen. Johnson, Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg was the more emphasized because the administrator had been told by the President last Saturday that he was wanted in carring out reorganization of the NRA.

At that time Gen. Johnson was reported elated at Mr. Roosevelt's insistence that he was needed. Two days later the administrator found that although he personally was favored by the President, his prerogatives as almost exclusive manager of the destinies of the Blue Eagle institution were in danger of being clipped.

It is known that he left the White House with a grim countenance, although he was still satisfied the President would support his wishes eventually. From this meeting Monday, Miss Perkins and Mr. Richberg, who were with the President before and after Gen. Johnson, retired by a side door of the White House. The administrator had referred all questions by newspapermen to them.

On the President's decision in the

Naval Aviator Crashes in Sea

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 22 (AP).—Lieut. (J. G.) J. S. Graff, a member of VS-2B Squadron, attached to the airplane carrier Saratoga, crashed to his death today in the Atlantic Ocean about 24 mlies off the Virginia coast.

Chief Radioman R. K. Kelly, who was with him in the two-seated scouting plane, was rescued after he had been carried down with the plane, but had managed to fight himself clear of the wreckage and come to the surface.

Lieut. Graff, whose home was in Ohio, graduated from the Naval Academy in the class of 1926.

Lieut. Graff had been with the squadron on one of its flights from the Saratoga and was returning for some cause undetermined when his motor went bad. Forced to land on the water, his plane, equipped for alighting only on land or a carrier deck, sank almost immediately in 240 feet of water. His body has not been recovered.

Thomas Asks Damages For Disrupted Speeches

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 22 (AP).—Norman Thomas, several times Socialist candidate for President, today struck back at officials whom he asserted harassed his spring speaking engagement in Illinois.

He filed a $15,000 damage suit in Federal Court against a deputy sheriff and the Peabody Coal Co., alleging false arrest. The suit was an outgrowth of the detention of Thomas and the Rev. Douglas B. Anderson, of Illiopolis, Ill., Socialist candidate for Congress, on May 21, at Taylorville.

Profit Motive Not in Danger, Roper Asserts

Says Government Favors "Just" Earnings for Business.

Insisting business is "getting back on its feet," Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper in a radio address last night vigorously denied the Government has any intention of eliminating the "profit motive" in private enterprise.

"Let me say that your Government and the masses of the people themselves resent unthinking statements or subtle suggestions that the profit motive in American life has been or is to be abolished," he said.

Coinciding with the President's efforts to reorganize recovery machinery on a centralized footing, the address was regarded as significant of Administration views.

Secretary Roper said the Roosevelt Administration is squarely behind the principle of "just profits for management and capital, and an equitable return to labor for its rightful rewards in the economic processes."

Points to Business Gains.

He said business already has recovered to the point where "more and more it is exerting its initiative and is able to relieve the Federal Government of responsibilities which under normal conditions belong to business."

The best answer to those who raise false bogies, he said, is to refer to the comparison of corporate earnings of today with those of a year ago, to the decline in business failures, and to the current solvency of banks as compared to past records.

"There are many evidences that business is getting back on its feet," he said. "Many corporations are showing this in renewed dividends from recent profits; another evidence is found in the fact that the reconstruction Finance Corporation has been paid back 42 per cent of all the loans that it has made to business. Could we find any better evidence that business is rapidly getting back on its own initiative."

Cites Employment Gains.

He said a Census Bureau survey shows substantial month-by-month increases in employment in wholesale and retail trades and in amusement enterprises during 1933, and that these together supply over one-fifth of all the employment in the United States.

"The last quarter of 1933 also indicated a betterment in part-time employment in these trades by 31.6 per cent," he said. "It is especially significant to note that this reemployment was gradual and consistent and represents a steady reabsorption by business of previously unemployed.

"Yes, there is plenty of statistical evidence of sound recovery. By substituting courage for pessimism and hope based on actual facts, the battle against depression will be won."

Holding the Government has no desire to abolish the profit motive, he said there is, on the other hand, an insistence that "certain profit abuses shall be discontinued."

"Unfair" Profits Opposed.

"There has been legitimate objection," he said, "to such things as unfair profits, as, for example, profits on watered stock or salaries which are out of proportion to services rendered."

Suggesting that "certain fundamental reforms are necessary if the American system of business, society and government is to be maintained," he added:

"We think readily of the elimination of child labor, the spreading of the opportunities of gaining a living, the enactment and administration of legislation that will stabilize our financial structure and prevent the exorbitant pyramiding of false values and the consequent loss of savings and livelihood to millions of our people."

Roper Calls Home Trade Attaches

Seeks Data on Countries for Pending Treaties.

Commercial attaches are being called home in groups from countries with which reciprocal trade treaties are to be negotiated, the Associated Press reported.

Secretary Roper said yesterday the men were being reutrned so the Commerce Department might obtain the latest information from abroad. They also are being acquainted with conditions at home to better assist ambassadors and ministers in negotiating the treaties.

European Air War Preparation Seen

Howell Says Continent Ranks Trade Second.

London, Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Clark Howell, chairman of the United States Air Board, arrived from the continent today to make a study of British aviation.

"As a result of what I've seen in Europe," he said, "I think the United States should increase its aviation preparedness, and I think we will.

"Everywhere I go in Europe, the main idea in aviation is to get ready for war. It prepares for war first, commerce second. Our idea in aviation is primarily commercial."

VERA Will Finance 150 Halifax Families

Richmond, Va., Aug. 22 (AP).—One hundred and fifty rural families in four of five counties in the Halifax County area will be embraced in the second program of rural rehabilitation, VERA headquarters announced today.

Each of the families will set up a farm on which they will be expected to earn their own subsistence, and, in addition, gradually pay back the VERA loans. The farms will cost from $800 to $1,000 each.

destroy the principles upon which our Government was formulated."

Its President, Jouett Shouse, who was formerly chairman of the Democratic National executive committee and later head of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, confirmed the fact that President Roosevelt had been fully informed of the plans to organize, through this new medium, 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 or more Americans who find themselves either voiceless or ineffective in the shaping of vitally important public policy.

To Defend Constitution.

In a formal announcement, Mr. Shouse quoted from the charter of the league, which has been incorporated here, that the purpose is "to defend and uphold the Constitution of the United States, and to gather and disseminate information that—

(1) Will teach the necessity of respect for the rights of persons and property as fundamental to every successful form of government, and

(2) Will teach the duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprise, to foster the right to work, earn, save and acquire property, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired."

In addition to the two former Democratic nominees for President, Al Smith and John W. Davis, and the two Republicans, former Gov. Miller and former Senator Wadsworth, of New York, the initially elected executive committee of the league includes Irenee du Pont, a political independent, who supported Smith in 1928 and Roosevelt in 1932. Others are to be added shortly, including leaders from the West, until the executive group numbers at least 18.

Not Anti-Roosevelt.

As previously related in The Post, the inspiration for this movement arises from growing apprehensiveness over the trend of the New Deal, and a desire to exert a corrective, clarifying influence. Mr. Shouse emphasized that it was not inimical to Mr. Roosevelt or his Administration, but, on the contrary, conceived its objectives to be identical with his—which accounts for the President's welcoming its formation.

Though the charter puts much emphasis on property rights, they are considered largely identical with human rights by the prime movers in the organization—and the choice of words was prompted by the view that much existing or threatened policy strikes first at long-established property rights which, in the opinion of the League's organizers, must be safeguarded if prosperity is to be restored and radicalism—socialism—escaped.

"I told the President all about the organization a week ago this afternoon," Mr. Shouse related in a newspaper conference at his National Press Building offices here. "We thought the President was entitled to know about this. I told him the whole story."

"What did he say?"

Hope to Help President.

"That's for him to say," was the reply. "We hope to prove of help to him."

"Is he in sympathy with the movement?"

"I won't assume to speak for the President," Mr. Shouse answered.

It can be stated authoritatively, however, that Mr. Roosevelt welcomed the organization as strengthening his own hand in dealing with "radicalism."

Asked about the danger of socialism or radicalism, Mr. Shouse said the league recognized that it existed in some sections, but thought it better not to specify those areas as yet.

"If at any time the organization sees danger of that sort it will speak up," he said.

Stressing the nonpolitical intent of the league, he remarked that millions of people in the country are wholly unorganized and without any means of having an effective voice in Government.

Purpose Is Educational.

"We expect to take no part in politics for the time being certainly. We won't participate in any way in the elections this fall. The purpose is educational, not political."

Reminded that some of the organizers were part of the so-called "Stop Roosevelt" movement of 1932, Mr. Shouse said with emphasis that that had "no significance whatever."

To a question whether a chief aim of the league is to combat radicalism, he replied, "Exactly."

He explained that, as in the organization of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, which had a powerful influence in bringing about repeal, the plan now is to organize nationally, with "modest headquarters" in every State and a central executive body in Washington.

"You'll know exactly where we stand," he said, in speaking of the material which the league means to give out by radio, press and platform. It plans further, he said, to appear before committees of Congress.

When one questioner asked if the movement was "anti-New Deal," the answer was:

"It definitely isn't 'anti-Roosevelt.'"

Aim Called Constructive.

The aim, he continued, is to organize millions of persons who have a property interest in homes, farms, savings, life insurance, bonds and stocks into a vocal group—to be "constructive and try to help the Administration."

When pressed further, he added: "I see no reason why a group of men who believe in a certain set of principles should not organize to advance those principles. Assuming for the sake of argument that there is a radical drift, the President would be as anxious as anybody else to check it, would he not?

"We hope to make this a valuable educational instrumentality through the press, radio and publications. To be effective we must have a large membership. The executive committee to be active must meet often."

Meetings weekly or oftener are contemplated, he said. The first group selected is composed of New Yorkers because they could get together conveniently, he explained.

Seven Divisions Planned.

A number of others have participated in preliminary conversations over the past six weeks or two months, he said, including former Democratic National Chairman John J. Raskob. Seven divisions of activity and research have been planned, each to be headed by some outstanding authority in each field, to be announced later. In addition to divisions of home owners, farmers, savings depositors, life insurance policyholders, stockholders and bondholders, there is a division on labor.

Other divisions are to be created as found advisable. A research staff is to be assembled. Repeatedly, Mr. Shouse disclaimed political designs or purposes. He remarked in reply to one question that if former Senator — now Representative — Wadsworth were to become a presidential candidate in 1936, he would be expected to withdraw. But he remarked also that nobody could look that far ahead with accuracy—that perhaps the league would be out of existence by then.

Adequate Fund on Hand.

That it is launched as no mere gesture is evident from its initially announced leaders and the plans outlined. Enough has evidently been subscribed already to assure an adequate working fund for a starter.

Regardless of the avoidance of political activity at the polls, the formation of the league is one of the most significant political developments since the New Deal men took office—for it reflects the rising tide of uneasiness and apprehension within Democratic ranks over the trend of New Deal policy. That it may well accelerate the drift toward party realignments in this country can not be ignored.

It reflects, also, the impulse among Republicans to join hands met with Democrats in preservation of principles commonly held by both old parties. So far as leading Republicans are concerned, they are further impelled by the absence of effective leadership at this time in their own ranks.

Has Conservative Tinge.

Manifestly the league stands for conservative, rather than radical, doctrine—if those labels are to be applied. However, as its organizers view it, the aim is to arrive at sound and workable policy, regardless of labels. And as is already well-known from past utterances of some of the leaders in the movement, there is emphatic disagreement with much past as well as potential policy.

The organizers believe that through the country there are many millions of business men, bankers, professional men, farmers, workers, who have a stake, whether large or small, that is jeopardized by dangers of destruction of currency, Federal credit and other values. They are convinced that the voice of these great numbers of Americans has been relatively inarticulate and incapable of expression through existing mediums, political or otherwise. The purpose of the league is to give voice to this widespread opinion—to bring it to bear upon the New Deal.

And the assurance has been given that President Roosevelt welcomes the expression, the guidance, in seeking a sound, enduring recovery.

Donovan Gives Workers Credit For Job Ruling

"I'm Happy to Be Back," He Tells Supporters in Radio Talks.

Two radio appearances were made last night by John Donovan, president of NRA Lodge, American Federation of Government Employes, in celebration of his reinstatement as a member of the Labor Advisory Board staff.

Discharged June 18 by Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, recovery administrator, Donovan returned to his duties yesterday after the National Labor Relations Board ruled the controlling reason for his dismissal was "his conduct as the head of a delegation of union employes" which sought to see Gen. Johnson.

The board's decision cited the National industrial recovery act's section 7 (a), which guarantees employes the right to bargain collectively and present grievances to their employers, and held NRA should not be "guided by any standard less exacting than that which applies to industry under the codes."

Introduced by Babcock.

Donovan was introduced to radio audiences over stations WRC and WOL by E. Claude Babcock, National president of the American Federation of Government Employes. He thanked organized labor and others for support in his reinstatement fight.

"I am very happy to be back on the job," he declared.

"The Donovan case," Babcock added, "has passed into history and I believe it will be written large on the record of labor's achievements in this country.

"It establishes the precedent that union activity is not a cause for discharge from the Government service and that unionism is not a matter in which Government officials may interfere. To be sure, the right to unionize was accorded Government workers by law, but this decision considerably strengthens their position."

"Victory Rally" Tonight.

Dozens of fellow workers earlier accorded Donovan a welcome when he returned to his desk at an NRA branch office in the National Savings Bank & Trust Building, Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest. He was presented with a basket of flowers labeled "Welcome Donovan."

Soon afterward the union president conferred with Dr. Gustav Peck, executive officer of the board, who earlier announced Donovan would be required to "toe the mark." The nature of the talk between Dr. Peck and Donovan was not divulged. Gen. Johnson has remained silent since the board's decision.

Officials withheld comment on whether Donovan would receive back salary for the six weeks' period of his dismissal. It is reported he was on the NRA pay roll at $65 a week.

Meanwhile, the Donovan Reinstatement League prepared for a "victory rally," to be held tonight at 8 o'clock in Thomson School, Twelfth and L streets northwest.

Thomas Views Plan As Anti-Roosevelt

"A strictly anti-Roosevelt organization," was the way Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, last night described the American Liberty League, incorporation of which was announced yesterday.

Pointing to the list of incorporators, including Alfred E. Smith, Jouett Shouse, former chairman of the Democratic National executive committee; James W. Wadsworth and others, Thomas described them as "diehards and standpatters who from the start have disagreed with President Roosevelt's New Deal program."

"Ultimately," the Oklahoma Senator said, "the league undoubtedly will be composed of both Democratic and Republican diehards whose chief aim will be to undermine the New Deal. And while assailing the President's program they will have none of their own to offer."

Thomas said the list of names read by him included a group bitterly opposed to the Administration's monetary policies. He said most of them were "gold dollar" men and "reactionaries."

"They won't get any place with their league," he predicted.

Liberty League Program

Jouett Shouse Stresses Nonpartisan Feature of New Movement and Plan to Uphold Constitutional Rights; Two Classes of Membership.

The American Liberty League has been incorporated under the laws of the District of Columbia.

It is a nonpartisan organization, formed, as stated in its charter, "to defend and uphold the Constitution of the United States and to gather and disseminate information that (1) will teach the necessity of respect for the rights of persons and property as fundamental to every successful form of government, and (2) will teach the duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprise, to foster the right to work, earn, save and acquire property, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired."

Its organization will consist of a board of National directors, composed of outstanding men and women from every State of the Union, from whom will be selected an executive committee of about 18 members.

This committee will assume all responsibility for the conduct of the league's affairs between meetings of the directors.

Divisions of League.

The league is divided into the following divisions: Howe-owners' division, farmers' division, labor division, savings depositors' division, life insurance policyholders' division, bondholders' division and stockholders' division.

Other divisions will be created from time to time as may be found necessary.

Careful consideration is being given the matter of selecting chairmen for these various divisions.

Each division chairman will be a member of the executive committee, and, in addition thereto, the following gentlemen initially have been elected and have agreed to serve:

John W. Davis, Irenee du Pont, Nathan L. Miller, Alfred E. Smith, James W. Wadsworth.

I have been asked to become president of the league. The other officers, directors and members of the executive committee will be announced from time to time as they are chosen.

Headquarters in Capital.

"The headquarters of the league will be in Washington, with offices in New York and other cities. State divisions will be established and all citizens who believe in the principles for which it has been created as set out in its charter will be invited to join.

"The league will become a real factor in assisting toward recovery and the restoration of prosperous conditions for all our people. It will take an active interest in and definite psition on questions of legislation affecting economic and social problems. It will report to its members and the public generally the conclusions reached as a result of its research and studies. It will cooperate with the President and the Congress in securing such legislation as will accomplish constructive results.

"There will be two classes of membership, one a regular membership embracing all those who subscribe to the principles enunciated, but can not afford to contribute, the other a contributing membership embracing those who in addition render monetary help toward the league's support. Our aim is to secure hundreds of thousands of contributing members so that the activities of the league will be sustained through numerous contributions of compartively small amount.

"As prescribed by its charter, the league is to be absolutely nonpartisan in character. The question of party affiliation will not enter into consideration in the mater of membership. All who believe in its aims will be invited to join. It has no covert purposes. There is no object sought to be attained beyond the simple statement contained in its charter and quoted above. It will unite several millions of people from all walks of life who are now without organized influence in legislative matters, and thus enable these people to have a consequential voice in securing constructive legislation and in preventing any measures designed to destroy the principles upon which our Government was formulated and under which we have prospered as has no other nation in the history of the world."

4 Felled in FERA Clash in Milwaukee

Work to Continue Despite Attack by Strike Pickets.

Milwaukee, Aug. 22 (AP).—FERA authorities in Milwaukee today ordered resumption of all projects in the county tomorrow despite a clash today between approximately 1,000 strike pickets and 75 FERA workers, in which four men were injured and one arrested.

Three workmen were felled by stones as they dropped their tools on a southwest side project and fled for a tool shed when a "flying squadron" of pickets rushed them.

Strikers demand a 30-hour week of five days, union rates for skilled labor and minimum wages up to a dollar an hour for semiskilled laborers.

British Book Predicts Boom; Stocks Jump

Author Says Roosevelt Policies Soon Will Bear Fruit.

house—and the increased activity in the stock market. But they find it difficult to offer an alternative explanation.

The New York security market on Monday sank to the lowest depths of lethargy. The pessimism which Wall Street has felt for some time seemed to be more confirmed. Only 274,240 shares turned over during the day and of the 1,199 issues listed on the "big board" only 488, or less than one-half, were dealt in.

When trading started yesterday a change came over the market. A flurry of buying orders caused brokers to postpone working out their favorite cross-word puzzles. In the first two hours 330,000 shares had changed hands, and when the market closed the turnover for the day was computed at 579,510 shares, with many showing price advances of from 1 to 4 points.

What was a flurry of orders yesterday morning became a deluge of buying instructions for a short period this morning, when in the second hour of trading the ticker ran several minutes behind transactions. The brokerage fraternity in Wall street had known many far busier days, but few so refreshing and encouraging.

Neither yesterday nor today was there any news which might cause this rush to buy securities. The daily commentators of why stock prices go up or go down sensed a revival of inflationary psychology, but nothing was said in Washington to inspire such a feeling.

The chart experts pointed out that a record of activity or inactivity usually is followed by a marked change and that this explanation accounted for what happened Tuesday. There also were rumors in the financial community that the Government soon would do something for the railroads to meet their added burdens of pensions and labor costs. But the rise in prices was not confined to railroad and railroad equipment stocks.

Then it became known that Simon & Schuster had sold within 12 hours 11,000 copies of the Angas pamphlet, described by a book reviewer as a "glorified tip sheet." It was reported that one brokerage house had bought 2,500 copies for distribution to customers. Book shops in the Wall street section have been doing a rushing business with the pamphlet.

Buying of the pamphlet, which started on Monday and Tuesday with such briskness, appeared to be increasing today and the publishers reported that the pamphlet was well on the way to breaking best-seller records.

Financial Editor's Opinion.

C. Norman Stabler, financial editor of the New York Herald Tribune, reported "a renewal of inflation talk in Wall street" and continued:

"Among the causes of this talk may be included the book by Maj. L. L. B. Angas, British stock broker, 'The Coming American Boom,' copies of which were distributed in great profusion in the financial district yesterday.

"Max Schuster, of Simon & Schuster, the American book publishers, described it as a ray of hope to a dark and weary world and it was just that to Wall street brokers, who are overanxious for a boom and some speculation.

"Despite the desirability of a boom, the conditions under which Maj. Angas thinks the United States will have one leaves much to be desired, for he believes it will be brought about by artificial methods of credit inflation, such as the Administration has used, and that if necessary will resort to printing-press money. In other words, it is not to be a boom based on confidence in business, but rather on a total lack of confidence in our money."

In an adjoining column under the caption "Comment in Wall Street" the Herald Tribune has this paragraph:

"No doubt the wish is father to the thought. In any event, brokerage partners and personnel paid homage yesterday to the forecaster from across the ocean by at least buying his book. One newsdealer reported that he had sold 100 copies of 'The Coming American Boom' by Maj. L. L. B. Angas. A stock exchange floor member reported that there was much talk that yesterday's market was the start of the boom. Serious observers, however, pointed out the Englishman's theories could be cut to pieces and that in reality the author hedges on the probability of his predictions."

Other Critics Doubtful.

The Wall Street Journal, speaking of Tuesday's trading, stated that "maybe publication in this country of Maj. L. L. B. Angas's glowing forecast on the course of prices had something to do with it, but at any rate, the Dow-Jones industrial average yesterday closed fractionally above the high point of the narrow range which has held for three weeks."

The New York Times on its financial page, in undertaking to analyze the Tuesday trading, also referred to discussion in the "street" of the "much heralded" Angas book and commented that "while the confident prediction of an imminent rise in stock prices here, holding out even the choice possibility of a return to the levels of 1929, made pleasant summer reading, it can hardly be said that this foreign market letter adds greatly to the store of financial information."

The Times writer goes on to point out that Maj. Angas' theory regarding the importance of the piling up of excess reserves in banks and the expansion of bank deposits through Government spending as laying a basis for an expansion "has been stressed repeatedly by writers for the various banks and security houses as well as by contributors to the newspapers and periodicals."

In another section the New York Times devotes several columns to reviews of the Angas pamphlet, including one signed by Mr. Warburg. The latter condemns the pamphlet as "a rather superficial analysis of the New Deal," and added that "it is the sort of literature which more than anything else will contribute toward a repetition of the 1929 disaster and toward making the present effort at controlled inflation end in a wild inflationary orgy."

Mr. Warburg held that the monograph "is a very convincing refutation of the belief held by some that the Roosevelt monetary policies are not inflationary," and added that "it is a convincing proof that the foundation for very extensive inflation has been laid and that this inflation is not far off."

"But the book provides no solace whatsoever," he adds, "to those who criticize the Roosevelt monetary policies; not because they have failed to bring about inflation, but because they seem likely to produce an inflationary orgy that will get out of control."

John Chamberlain, Times book reviewer, held that "Major Angas' predictions are of the common or garden variety," and that "he has written a broker's book that differs hardly a whit from the news letters sent out by a number of services in Washington and elsewhere."

The Angas pamphlet indicates that he is of the same currency inflation school as that of Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, believing, as he says, that "the great underlying causes of the big cyclical swings from prosperity to depression are undoubtedly purely monetary in character." He also is a disciple of the John Maynard Keynes economic school, which contends nations can spend their way out of depressions, provided the governments spend enough.

It is somewhat remarkable that Maj. Angas' pamphlet has caused such a stir when the more renowned Keynes has said practically the same thing and time and again market tip letters have predicted a coming boom as a result of monetary redundancy—on which the Britisher lays so much stress—without any public reaction.

Wall Street Welcomes Change.

One explanation may be that Wall Street is weary of lethargic trading and is willing to put faith in anything that offers some hope. Again many have been wishing for a boom, the majority for a stabilized recovery, and this pamphlet appears to them as a fulfillment of their wishes.

Another explanation is that Maj. Angas coupled his predictions regarding the outcome of the Roosevelt policies with advice to buy stocks. He lists some specific types, but his advice seems to be to buy any kind of stocks and goes so far as to assert that "although almost all shares will rise in America, the rubbish will rise much faster than the leaders, and industries with a bad recent earnings record will prove much more profitable purchases than the stable industries which have held up well throughout the depression."

A third aspect of the public reaction to the pamphlet is found in Maj. Angas' past guessing accomplishments. In 1925 he wrote a pamphlet titled "The Coming Collapse in Rubber," which predicted the end of the artificial rubber boom, followed by a long, disastrous slump. In 1931 he wrote "The Coming Rise in Gold Shares," six months before England left the gold standard and prices of the yellow metal started to soar upward. He also is credited with accurately charting the course of British recovery in "The Course of the Coming (English) Boom," written two days after England left gold. In April last year he wrote "The Coming Rise in Wall Street," predicting the boom in stocks which reached a climax last July. His brochure, "The Coming Collapse in Gold," proved a cropper because President Roosevelt devalued the gold dollar and enhanced the price of the metal.

Dispatches from London state that while the financial district of that city "continues to be more entertained than impressed" by Maj. Angas' prophecies, it regards him as more than a frivolous guesser, chiefly on the basis of his only major work, "Investment."

Pamphlet On Sale In District Stores

Washington bookshops yesterday reported a brisk sale of the paper-covered pamphlet, "The Coming American Boom," by Maj. L. L. B. Angas, the brochure which has caused a flurry in Wall Street. One store featured the pamphlet in its window and had a small pile on a table near the door.

$427,000 Theft Spoils Fight Waited as Clew

Sea Manhunt Abandoned; Shift to Land Calls All N. Y. Police.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 22 (AP).—Convinced that a dispute over spoils in the $427,000 armored-car holdup will ultimately lead to a "break" in the case, police tonight suddenly shifted one of the greatest manhunts in the history of the Nation from sea to land.

"We always like a big party rather than a restricted affair," Assistant Chief Inspector John J. Sullivan commented on the holdup executed by at least a dozen thieves with amazing precision.

"There always is more hope of a round-up when a large number figure in a crime. There's more chance of a row among themselves over the loot and then somebody is likely to start talking."

United States Men Aid Hunt.

Indications that the Department of Justice would aid in the manhunt came when Frank Fay, chief of the Bureau of Investigation, called on Inspector Sullivan at headquarters. At Washington it was said Fay's visit was "routine" and not connected with the holdup.

The unexpected shift of the search from sea to land was occasioned by an order that all squad and detective cars immediately communicate with precincts and district officers.

Until the order came the search had been concentrated at sea, where police boats and airplanes had been patrolling for the cabin cruiser and speed boat in which the holdup men escaped with the greatest amount of cash ever seized in a robbery.

Police Find Boat.

The Popeye was eliminated after police questioned Charles Coleberg, who took the 30-foot cabin cruiser from the foot of Bay Seventeenth street to Harm's Yacht Basin yesterday.

Taylor, the son of a former city comptroller now employed as a State auditor, cried when his father confronted him at police headquarters this afternoon.

The father, Marvin Taylor, told reporters his son informed him he had "told the truth." The father said he asked his son to "tell everything," and his son replied, "I have already done that."

controversy depends whether the NRA will be reorganized in such a way that it will carry on in much the same fashion as in the past, or really will be reorganized with changes in policy. The issue, it was disclosed yesterday, is whether there shall be a board of control in authoritative management of the NRA or a board which shall be more advisory in power, leaving the real control still in the hands of the administrator and his deputies.

Reversed Self, Foes Say.

It was learned authoritatively that Gen. Johnson had recommended creation of a board to guide the NRA, but the opponents in Administration ranks argue he has reversed himself by now proposing a sort of board which would continue "one-man control."

Administration leaders said that the significance of the division is not merely the issue of the continuance of the Johnson personality and technique in complete sway of the NRA. It is an issue, they said, of future NRA policy and industrial control. If a powerful board, it was pointed out, is set up it is slated to make fundamental changes in policy. The administrator and his aids would be expected to carry out these policies.

It was said the changes probably would be in the direction of curtailing price-fixing devices, lightening the pressure of the brakes on industrial competition, checking monopolistic tendencies and enforcing more rigorously Section 7 (a), the labor provision of the National recovery act.

It is claimed that Gen. Johnson is alone in his idea, and those at odds with him would have the policy board lay down rulings from which deviation would be made extremely difficult. On the other hand, the administrator is represented as insisting that flexibility remain in the hands of the administrator and his assistants to alter policy and create it as situations develop.

Would Consolidate Codes.

According to information forthcoming from Administration ranks yesterday, Gen. Johnson's present program looks toward administrative rather than policy changes. He would consolidate codes, eventually seeking to reduce their number from 550 to 300. He would classify them in 22 divisions and then arrange for five "sectors" of work.

There would be an assistant administrator in charge of each of the five sectors, and under them would be 11 deputies. The administrator would be in complete command, limited only by a certain amount of deference to the proposed control board. Because of this program the administrator, it was said by those who have knowledge of the situation, has gone back on his original recommendation for an all-powerful policy board.

"He has placed himself and everyone else in a difficult situation," it was observed in one quarter.

Cuban On Way Here To Sign Trade Treaty

Key West, Fla., Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Cosme de la Torriente, Cuban secretary of State, arrived late today from Havana by steamer and left by rail for Washington, where he expects to sign a new reciprocal trade treaty.

The official said he looked upon the treaty as a "new birth" for Cuba, because it will open up further business trade between Cuba and the United States by reduced tariffs provided.

August Cool? Weather Men Don't Think So

This August in the District isn't the blue-nosed, abnormally cold old man, shivering in his flannels and reaching for a bottle of warming applejack, as many Washingtonians have begun to think.

Just when the popular opinion in certain circles reached the conclusion that so far August has been unusually chilly, the Weather Bureau came along and stuck a pin in the mental balloon.

The cumulative temperature deficiency in Washington this month has been only 9 degrees, the Weather Bureau explained.

This means that every day's average temperature has been only .3 of a degree cooler than in normal August weather. The lowest temperature this month has been 60 degrees, recorded early Tuesday morning. Tuesday was the District's coolest day this month.

Hottest day of the current month was 92, recorded on August 14 and 15. Precipitation has been 1.67 inches above normal.

Washington has been cooler because masses of cold air from the northwest have been constantly refreshing the atmosphere, the Weather Bureau explained.

Moving into the East, the cool air forces out the stagnant air, which becomes overheated. Constant repetition of the wind migration from the North has kept Washington cool.

Yesterday was a day of contrasting temperatures here. The maximum was 80 degrees at 4:15 p. m., and the minimum, 62 at 5 a. m.

Today will be fair, with not much change in temperature, the Weather Bureau predicted.

Pointing to torrid, searing July, officials said the general idea August has been abnormally cool is probably a matter of contrast.

Heavy Rainfall Ends Drought In Southwest

Oklahoma, Texas Fields Drenched; Too Late to Save Corn, Cotton.

Pastures, choked with bony cattle, much of it purchased by the Government, will be green within "ten days," said farm agents; fall gardens will sprout much-needed vegetables; farmers will have fall feed crops; dry water holes will fill up.

The live-stock industry alone in Oklahoma got $25,000,000 worth of benefit from the rain, the Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman, an agricultural paper, estimated.

Over the brown plains of western Oklahoma and north Texas the rain fell, although some extreme southern Oklahoma and Oklahoma Panhandle points missed it.

Canyon, Tex., had an inch of rain.

Showers spotted many Kansas localities and Liberal, in the southwestern wheat belt, was drenched with more than 3 inches.

Arapaho Indians, starting their annual sun dance on the North Canadian River near Geary, Okla., grinned as an inch of rain pelted down on the great tepee where preliminary rituals have been held since Sunday night.

The break in the drought enabled the FERA to complete plans for moving thousands of unemployed farm families back to the land with Government help, and to provide seed and live stock for those still on parched acreage.

It was too late, however, to help growing crops, with corn a virtual failure in most localities and the cotton yield already cut to the lowest point in many years by the long dry spell.

Stroke Is Fatal To D. C. Newsman

Archibald Pool Survived by Widow, Daughter.

Archibald Pool, for 11 years on the staff of the Washington Herald, died yesterday at his home, 1907 I street northwest, as the result of a paralytic stroke.

Mr. Pool came to Washington from Kentucky where he was born in Marshall County in 1863. His first work was with the Paducah Times and other western Kentucky papers. In 1899 he moved to Louisville, where for 20 years he was on the editorial staff of the Courier-Journal. In 1915 he went to Frankfort as managing editor of the State Journal, remaining there until his association with the Hearst papers began.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Atlanta Taylor Pool; a daughter, Sophia Pool Kepner, and a grandson, Arch Kepner.

The funeral will be private, with interment in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Cotton Strike Given Support Of Federation

300,000 Expected to Walk Out by September 1; Backed by Green.

Federation of Labor to work with the special textile strike committee, which is headed by Francis J. Gorman, of New York.

Moreover, he said he would call on other National labor organizations to lend trained representatives to assist "in organizing the strike and in carrying it forward to a successful conclusion." This action is "in conformity with the traditional policy" of the A. F. of L., he added.

Although President Roosevelt's approval of hour reduction in the cotton garment code has no immediate bearing on the situation, both Mr. Green and other labor leaders professed to see in it an indication of which way the wind is blowing. They said it will have "a tremendous psychological effect."

Effective October 1, the amendment will shorten hours from 40 to 36 a week, without reductions in wages. It was recommended by Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson and ordered into effect by the President before he left late Tuesday for the funeral of the late Speaker Rainey.

Reemploys 10,000.

"The President's action," according to the NRA, "will effect not only an increase of about 11 per cent in hourly rates and a rise of about 10 per cent above May 1 levels for cotton garment workers, but also will permit the reemployment of more than 10,000 workers. The direct cost to the consumer * * * will be less than 2 per cent."

Explaining that the amendment "overcomes serious conflicts" with codes for allied industries, the NRA also put forth a laudatory statement by Sidney Hillman, member of the Labor Advisory Board and president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America. He hailed it as proof that the Blue Eagle is "a living symbol of a real New Deal" for labor.

Meanwhile, an executive session of the Cotton Textile Industrial Relations Board was called at the NRA to consider means to dissuade union chieftains from their expressed intentions of going ahead with the general textile strike. After the meeting, however, Chairman Bruere said that a statement prepared by the board would be held up until approved by other officials.

Further meetings of both camps will be held today, preparing the groundwork for negotiations. A remark by Mr. Green, to the effect that "working people don't strike just for the sake of striking," was taken to mean the labor chieftains are hopeful some adjustment of grievances may be proposed by the industry through its code authority.

Both Sides Quiet.

But as far as could be learned no opening move was made yesterday by either side. Mr. Bruere declined to comment, and nothing was forthcoming from the labor fortress, but militant preparations for the strike. Chief complaint of the textile union involves the use of the "stretch-out" system, increasing the number of looms tended by workers.

At the RFC, meantime, Mr. Jones denied that the President's decision to "peg" cotton at 12 cents had anything to do with the threatened strike. In the event of a general walkout, however, loans on cotton at this figure may have the effect of sustaining the price despite a slump in demand.

The RFC chairman said that of $299,000,000 set aside for 10-cent cotton loans last year, $139,000,000 had been loaned and $90,000,000 repaid. This leaves a balance on hand of $250,000,000, the exact amount allocated anew to the Commodity Credit Corporation, the agency handling the loans.

Farmers Restricted.

Mr. Jones confirmed a report that cotton farmers must agree to abide by AAA restrictions to obtain loans with the statement, "whatever they've got to comply with, that'll be made conditional to the loans." He added that the $250,000,000 should prove "more than enough" to handle this year's crop.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation chairman said he "had no idea what the requirements may be," but from the AAA came an intimation that next year's crop will be curtailed to some extent, at least, despite this year's slump in production. The cotton carryover, it was explained by Chester C. Davis, farm administrator, will still be considerable.

The Government's new loan offer to cotton farmers will be made available as soon as the AAA draws up regulations, Mr. Jones said. The bulk of the loans, carrying a 4 per cent interest rate, and guaranteed by the R. F. C., are made through local banks, although the Commodity Credit Corporation may lend directly.

U. S. Effort to Settle Bus Strike Thwarted

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—Trustees of the Chicago Motor Coach Employes Fraternity today refused to discuss with conciliators the possibility of joining the Bus Drivers Union, an A. F. of L. affiliate, ending hope of settling the eight-day bus drivers' strike in this manner.

Federal conciliators continued conference with representatives of the striking drivers, the bus company, and the fraternity, a so-called company union, whose members have remained at work, today, but reached no adjustment of differences.

25,000 Attend Last Rites for Speaker Rainey

Roosevelt Heads Throng of Mourners at Illinois Estate.

stone Greene County Courthouse, preceding the service.

All told, it was estimated by State highway police that more than 25,000 came to this little county seat for a final tribute to the man most of them knew as "Henry T."—good farmer and a good Congressman.

Legionnaires Carry Casket.

Speaker Rainey, who died unexpectedly in a St. Louis Hospital Sunday night, returned to the "home folk" for the last time at 8:40 a. m. Sorrowing friends stood with bowed heads as the massive copper casket was carried into the courthouse by Legionnaires.

In the four hours the body lay there, Legionnaires estimated an average of 50 persons passed each minute—a total of 12,000. Some were farmers with overalls who always voted for Rainey because he was their friend and a farmer himself. Many others viewed the body at Walnut Hall, where the body lay in state from 1 p. m. until 4 p. m., when the President arrived and services were started.

The short Episcopal service consisted chiefly of Biblical quotations and prayers. Services at the grave likewise were brief. There were prayers and quotations from Revelations. An American Legion bugler sounded taps, which were echoed from across the town. Then the casket was lowered into the grave.

Several thousand persons were at the station when President Roosevelt arrived. Some cheered as he left for the Rainey estate, but he only nodded in recognition, the famous Roosevelt smile being missing during his mission of sorrow. Thousands more were at the station when the Presidential train departed.

Five Representatives mentioned for the Speakership of the House were among the mourners—Rayburn, of Texas; Byrnes, of Tennessee, Bankhead, of Alabama, Sabath, of Illinois, and Rankin, of Mississippi.

Gov. Henry Horner, of Illinois; Senator William D. Deterich, of Illinois; the entire Illinois Congressional delegation and many other notables also were here.

Wheat Parley Guards Report

Findings of Conference to Be Kept Secret.

London, Aug. 22 (AP).—Chances of publication of the 1,500-word document dealing with the world wheat problem, which will be submitted to the 21 interested governments, appeared slim tonight on the eve of final session of the International Wheat Conference.

Argentine and Russian representatives strongly favor revealing the contents of the closely guarded document, but American Canadian and Australian delegations are opposed, and most of the Europeans present favor the latter group.

Knowledge that influential interests in America, England and other countries, which bitterly oppose further government control, would bring strong pressure to bear if the present proposals were publicized was given as the chief reason for secrecy.

Styrian Nazi Dies For High Treason

Slayer of Soldier Cries "Heil Hitler!" Dies.

Leoben, Austria, Aug. 22 (AP).—The first Styrian Nazi to be hanged went to the gallows today.

He was Rudolph Erlbacher, convicted of high treason and of the killing of an officer of the Heimwehr in fighting at Ennstal in the recent Nazi revolt.

An excited crowd gathered as the hour for the hanging approached, but soldiers and gendarmes kept them from the streets near the jail. Erlbacher shouted, "Heil, Hitler! Heil, Germany!" from the gallows.

Textile Strike Is Unjustified, Sloan Contends

President of Institute, Speaking for Owners, Cites Wage Rise.

(Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press.)

New York, Aug. 22.—The impending Nation-wide strike in the cotton textile industry "is not justified by facts which have been established by impartial Government economists," George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton-Textile Institute, said tonight.

Sloan, in the first statement representative of the views of cotton-mill operators since the strike vote, declared:

"As a result of three basic wage provisions in the code, the hourly wages paid in March, 1934, show an increase of 70 per cent, as compared with March, 1933, when there was no code.

"All of this has meant a substantial increase in manufacturing costs and the research and planning division of the NRA found, after a comprehensive investigation last June, that 'under existing conditions there is no factual or statistical basis for any general increase in cotton-textile code wage rates.'"

The United Textile Workers of America, whose strike vote was sanctioned today by William Green, president of the A. F. of L., demanded an increase in wage rates, recognition of the union for collective bargaining, an end to alleged discrimination and to the "stretch-out" system.

The union estimated its strength at 300,000 members.

Sloan said "at present there are 1,200 cotton mills with 460,000 employes."

"The work week," Sloan said, "was reduced to a maximum of 40 hours from an average of about 54. The number of workers employed have reached a level higher than at any time since 1927. Those added to the pay roll between March, 1933, and March, 1934, totaled 140,000."

Canada, Short of Hay, To Regulate Exports

Ottawa, Aug. 22 (AP).—The alarming shortage of hay and straw in many parts of Canada has caused the government to take steps to regulate exports by license, it was learned unofficially today.

The situation the prairie provinces and in the maritimes to a lesser extent, is pressing, according to representations to the government. Saskatchewan, a heavy producer of hay, has to import an estimated 24,000 tons from Manitoba and 3,000 tons from Alberta, to meet the requirements of the drought area.

Anti-Japanese Riot Doubted In Salt River

Arizona Governor, Despite Tokyo Protest, Says Law Will Prevail.

Phoenix, Ariz., Aug. 22 (AP). Arizona's Governor placed his faith today in the "common sense" of the citizens of this State to avert physical violence in an attempted ouster of Japanese agriculturists, and informed the State Department in Washington he believed the problem could be solved without involving the United States and Japan in controversy.

Having reviewed several urgent requests from Washington to use his authority to avoid a racial clash, and having read a dispatch from Tokyo stating "Arizona has supplanted Manchuria as Japan's principal trouble zone," Gov. B. B. Moeur telegraphed Acting Secretary of State William Phillips:

"I am in close touch with the anti-Japanese situation in the Salt River Valley.

"I feel sure that the common sense of Arizona's citizens will prevent any violence.

"You may be assured that laws of Arizona will be enforced without fear or favor."

The Governor received his first appeal from Phillips yesterday, and in the last 24 hours Attorney General Arthur T. Laprade held several telephone conversations with the Far East relations division of the State Department of Washington.

It was allowed to be understood that the State Department feared reprisals against United States residents in Manchukuo should Japanese be ejected from the Salt River Valley.

Ranchers of the Fowler district, in which most of the Japanese in the State are congregated, in a series of protest meetings last week set next Saturday night as the "dead line" for the departure of Japanese agriculturists.

Heat Kills Two Brothers.

Further Wheat Cut Is Believed ToBeImminent

Farm Administration May Slash Acreage Again to Keep Prices Up.

Despite widespread drought losses Farm Administration officials yesterday considered reduction of wheat production next year by 2,000,000 or more acres below the normal yield.

Thought was given to continuation of the curtailment program to limit the 1935 crop to between 62,000,000 and 64,000,000 acres as compared to some 65,800,000 acres which would be planted if Secretary Wallace should execute tentative plans to withdraw all wheat restrictions next year.

With the Secretary out of town, several of his aids were known to be prepared to recommend renewed control on his return to Washington later this week. They feared even one year of unrestricted production would cause great losses to the farmer by driving prices down.

775,000,000-Bushel Yield.

Statisticians insisted about 775,000,000 bushels could be grown next year on 62,000,000 acres. They predicted a carry-over this year of at least 100,000,000 bushels and pointed to average domestic consumption of 625,000,000 bushels, which would produce a carry-over next year of 250,000,000 bushels.

If even that much control produced a carry-over of 250,000,000 bushels, officials privately commented, the price to the farmers probably would be comparatively low. They added such a price, however, would be far greater than could be expected through unlimited production.

Chester Davis, farm administrator, disclosed yesterday that an important announcement on wheat would be made in a few days, but declined to discuss next year's control program.

"No definite program for 1935 has been finally adopted," he said, "although general agreement has been reached within the administrative group as to the method of approach for the coming crop year.

"Sentiment of cooperating farmers, as it comes to us, favors continued cooperation in productive effort that will yield a balanced supply for world and domestic markets at a fair farm price. Definite announcement of the program is withheld, pending the developments of the international wheat conference now in session at London and the final development of the plan within the Administration."

The drought has brought consideration of plans for creation of a reserve to prevent distress in emergencies. This phase of the problem, however, remains to be decided.

Import Held Possible.

Continuation of acreage limitation in some form next year, coupled with another severe drought, officials conceded, might make necessary importation of wheat by the United States, which for many years has exported large quantities.

Experts argued, though, that very little more wheat would have been produced this year without the 15 per cent acreage control program because of the drought. They predicted the amount planted next year would have little effect on ultimate production should the severe dry weather persist.

Davis announced the department's live stock purchasing program in the drought area had exceeded the 3,000,000-head mark, and that purchase of sheep had just begun. Caution will be exercised, he emphasized, to limit purchases to those cattle and sheep actually faced with starvation.

Drought Persists.

Meanwhile, the Weather Bureau reported the drought still persisted in many Western and Southwestern States, but well distributed rain last week helped conditions in the Ohio Valley.

Rainfall relieved conditions somewhat in Missouri, while local rains were helpful in sections of Iowa, Nebraska, South Dakota, Minnesota and Wisconsin.

"Otherwise," the report added, "the weather between the Mississippi River and the Rocky Mountains continued extremely unfavorable, although lower temperatures helped some. The absence of rain and the continuation of abnormal heat were especially harmful in the Southern plains, centering in Oklahoma, and extending into the adjoining States on the north, south and east."

Merger Scheme Of Hitler Hit BySchuschnigg

Austrian Chancellor Says Autonomy of Nation Will Be Preserved.

(Copyright, 1934 by United Press.)

Nice, France, Aug. 22.—Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg, of Austria, declared on arrival here today that his government would fight to the end any efforts toward an "anschluss," or merger, with Germany.

The new Fascist leader of embattled Austria declared his administration would bitterly oppose Germany's mixing into Austrian domestic affairs, warning Adolf Hitler, in effect, to keep on his side of the border and keep his hands off Austrian affairs.

"Austria's foreign policy is to develop in peaceful channels," the chancellor said. "Regarding this anschluss, I represent my late predecessor, and follow in the footsteps of Herr Dollfuss.

"I am of the firm opinion that Germany has no right to mix herself in Austrian internal problems or policies, any more than Austrians have any right to dictate German domestic policies."

The chancellor dodged direct questions regarding the possible restoration of the Hapsburgs as rulers of Austria.

"I do not consider the restoration as a current problem. It is not a political problem, but, as I see it, a legal question whether or not the Hapsburgs could obtain their restoration and their confiscated property."

"Will the Hapsburgs ever occupy the throne again?" Schuschnigg was asked.

Schuschnigg, known as a monarchist, refused to answer.

The chancellor insisted his political conversations ended when he left Italy yesterday, and that no political or private talks were scheduled while he is in France.

He came here from Florence, where he met Premier Benito Mussolini yesterday and discussed mutual problems, including Italian support against Nazi efforts for an "anschluss" with Germany, which Il Duce opposes.

89 Candidates Seek Office in Prince Georges

Republican Rivalries Leave Party Without Full Ticket.

Eighty-nine candidates for political office will be in the field in the Prince Georges County primary election September 12, it was indicated at a late hour last night. Forty-seven Republicans and 42 Democrats filed.

As the zero hour approached, it appeared that confusion brought about by rivalries within its ranks would leave the Republican party without a complete ticket. Vacancies remained on the legislative ticket and that for judges of the orphans' court. Only five had filed for the six positions in the House of Delegates and one for the three posts in the orphans' court.

On the other hand, the G. O. P. faced a surplus of candidates for the State central committee, the State convention and the office of sheriff. The factional fight for control of the Republican county organization is reflected in the candidacy of those who filed for the central committee, while the battle for the Republican gubernatorial nomination between Senator Goldsborough and Harry Nice has resulted in supporters of each running for the State convention.

Full Democratic Ticket.

A well-balanced ticket has been filed by the Democratic party. Candidates are in the field for every office except that of county surveyor. Party leaders last night started to work persuading nonindorsed candidates to withdraw in the interest of party harmony. The first to step out was Edgar Hurtt Edelen, candidate for the House of Delegates, leaving only Walter L. Green in the field to contest the nomination with the organization candidates. Edelen refiled as a candidate for the State convention, for which he is believed to have the organization support.

Two Republican candidates filed yesterday for the key position of clerk of the Circuit Court and county treasurer. Sheriff W. Curtis Hopkins, one of the strongest of the G. O. P. candidates, filed for clerk of the court and Wiliam H. Brooke, member of the county board of license commissioners, filed for treasurer.

Five More File As Democrats In Montgomery

Fusion Party Given Until August 27 to Register Candidates.

Five additional Democrats filed their certificates of candidacy yesterday with F. Byrne Austin, clerk to the supervisors of elections of Montgomery County, Md., at Rockville. The time for filing of individual candidacies expired at midnight.

Those who filed were Snowden Athey, Burtonsville; J. Harry Welch, Chevy Chase; Frank J. Downey, Sandy Spring; Frederick Stohlman, Chevy Chase, and Thomas T. Mott, Bethesda, all for delegates to the Democratic State convention, and Curtis Walker, Chevy Chase, member of the Democratic State central committee.

No candidates for the Fusion party have filed as yet. The Fusion ticket will be filed in a petition signed by more than 500 voters, according to party leaders. The law does not require filing by this method before August 27.

Fusion leaders yesterday received a telegram from Deputy Attorney General Willis R. Jones confirming his telephone ruling that their ticket can be filed until August 27, and also from Kenneth Lyddane, attorney to the board of election supervisors, to the same effect.

No signs of the threatened filing by insurgent Republicans, which had been rumored for several days were in evidence late last night, although Austin said he would keep his office open until midnight in case any belated filers of certificates appeared.

Five Navy Rifles Stolen.

Officials of the Naval Proving Grounds at Indianhead, Md., yesterday reported the theft of five high-powered rifles from the storehouse. In the loot were three pump guns, one .30-30 rifle and a .45 rifle.

Legenza to Die For Murder of Truck Driver

Mais, Last of 5 Accused in Richmond Holdup, Goes on Trial Monday.

Richmond, Aug. 22 (AP).—Walter Legenza, charged with being one of five men who shot and killed a Federal Reserve Bank mail truck driver during a robbery, was found guilty early today at a trial which lasted only 13 hours. He was sentenced to die in the electric chair October 22.

Legenza was tried for the murder of E. M. Huband, shot to death the night of March 8. His conviction removes the third of five men who, the Government says, took part in the crime. Legenza was identified by one witness as the "trigger man" in the holdup.

Mais Trial Monday.

Robert Mais, also charged with being a member of the gang, will go on trial next Monday.

Arthur ("Dutch") Misunas, fifth member of the gang, has turned State's evidence.

Charles W. Moss, Legenza's attorney, today said he expected the State Supreme Court of Appeals to grant a writ of error in his client's case.

Moss contends that the rules of evidence were evaded in the trial. He will file a bill of exceptions, he said, and seek a new trial.

Loot Was Worthless.

Five men waylaid the bank truck, killed the driver and fled with mail bags which contained nothing more than canceled checks.

A star witness for the Commonwealth was Mrs. Lenora Gasslyn Fontaine, friend of "Big George" Phillips, who was slain in Washington April 12 by police. She described the activities of the five men during the past year and a half.

But it was from Misunas that the Commonwealth obtained the testimony which was the strongest support of its case against Legenza.

The big, florid, self-described "bad man" who was apprehended in California by postal inspectors and returned here for trial voluntarily confessed to his part in the crime while en route across country, and named Legenza from the witness stand as the man who shot and killed Huband.

He described his own part in the holdup, admitting he carried a machine gun, not for the purpose of shooting but for "intimidation."

Testimony Contradicted.

Misunas' testimony was contradicted by Mais and Marie McKeever, who described herself as Mais' sweetheart. These two defense witnesses accused Misunas of being the "trigger man" in the Richmond crime. The woman testified Misunas told her, "I was the trigger man in both holdups." The other holdup, she had testified, occurred in Baltimore.

Mais testified Misunas visited him at his home in Philadelphia and asked for money, explaining he had shot a man in Richmond and another in Washington and needed the money to get away. The defense sought to establish the alibi that the defendant was in New York at the time of the murder.

Legenza showed no emotion when the verdict was read.

Contest Seen In Kent County

Independent Democrats Enter Race Against "Harmony" Ticket.

Chestertown, Md., Aug. 22 (Spl.). With an independent Democratic ticket entering the field, subject to the September primaries, in opposition to the "harmony" ticket recently announced by the Beck and Copper factions of Kent County, the contest promises to be strenuous to the close of the campaign.

The two principal Democratic wings have merged their interests to prevent a bruising primary fight, but the attempt apparently has failed and though a full slate has not been announced by the insurgents, backed by prominent members of the Kent County Farm Bureau, a ticket is being made up which will back, it is said, the candidacy of Dr. Charles H. Conley, of Frederick, for Governor.

Meanwhile, Republicans, heartened by dissension within the Democratic ranks, have made up a partial slate and are expected to get up a full ticket, with the exception of a candidate for State's attorney. It is believed Stephen R. Collins, encumbent and candidate to succeed himself on the harmony slate, will be unopposed either in the primary or general election.

Republicans thus far have announced Joseph Downey, of Rock Hall, for clerk of the Kent County Circuit Court; Dr. Frank Smith, of Fairlee, for register of wills; John T. Vickers, present sheriff, for county treasurer; George T. Williams, for county commissioner, and John N. Bennett, for sheriff.

Independent Democrats have named Dr. H. P. Copeland for the State Senate, Robert Shallcross to succeed himself as clerk of court, Preston Crowding for treasurer, Romie Morris for register of wills and Linwood A. Sutton for county commissioner.

The lad was helping his brother carry firewood away from the saw when he stumbled and fell against the blade. Funeral services will be held Friday.

Anne Arundel Fight Involves Every Office

W. Stromeyer, Annapolis, Surprise Democratic Senate Candidate.

Annapolis, Md., Aug. 22 (Spl.).—As midnight neared, the deadline for candidates to file certificates, indications were that Anne Arundel County Democrats would have contests on their hands for every office from State senator down to county surveyor, with the possible exception of the State's attorneyship, for which A. Theodore Brady, of Annapolis, candidate of the organization forces, is seeking reelection.

On the Republican side, principal fights will be waged around the nominatons for register of wills and sheriff.

Perhaps the biggest surprise of the belated filings was the candidacy of William F. Stromeyer (Democrat), Annapolis, for the senatorship, against Ridgley P. Melvin, incumbent Annapolis lawyer, who lives in the Second District. Both Stromeyer and Melvin are identified with the regular organization forces, although Melvin tops a slate of candidates indorsed by that element.

Both in regards to this and other offices, there is unrest within the party's ranks and it remains to be seen how much of a figure the activities of the Better Government League will cut in the primary voting. This group was formed with the avowed purpose of supporting whom it regarded as the best available candidates for the several offices. As a nonpartisan organization it has indorsed some Democrats and some Republicans, but not a complete slate. A few of its candidates are entered in the primary battle, but names of others will appear on the ballots at the general election in November, by petitions which are now being circulated.

Republicans Fill Slate.

The Republicans have practically completed their ticket with filings for register of wills and judges of the orphans court. Both parties will engage in a merry scramble for the nomination for sheriff, each having four candidates.

Today's filings were:

For State Senator—William F. Stromeyer, Democrat, Annapolis.

For House of Delegates—Irving H. Turner, Democrat, Fourth District; T. Roscoe Hall, Republican, First District; Welling W. Sullivan, Republican, Second District.

S. V. Kemp Attacks Use of Jurymen in Hearing Certain Cases.

Aboard the Britannic, at Sea, Aug. 22 (AP).—Virginia lawyers, attending the seagoing convention of the State Bar Association, today heard President S. V. Kemp say that trial by jury in civil cases is inefficient.

At the same session C. O'Conor Goolrick, a framer of the new ABC law, expressed confidence in the new liquor-control act, while an association committee brought in a report urging rigid educational requirements for the bar.

First business sessions of the association, which put out from Norfolk yesterday for a week's Bermuda cruise, were held aboard ship today.

Three or Five Judges.

President Kemp proposed a trial of law cases before a court of three or five judges, in which the opinion of the majority would become the judgment of the court to replace the time-honored practice of civil case trial by jury, which he branded as "unscientific and inefficient."

Such a change, he said, would assure a trial by men trained in the profession instead of inexperienced jurors, and would eliminate unnecessary and prolonged delays.

Mr. Goolrick said that after such changes as experience may dictate to the next General Assembly are made "we can face the future of liquor control in Virginia with reasonable complacency."

"State stores, so far established, together with the sale of beer and wine by private licensees, have, in those localities where set up, dealt the bootlegger a 'solar plexus' which has him staggering against the ropes and will, in a short time, send him down for the final count," said the former State senator from Fredericksburg.

ABC Board Praised.

He praised the personnel of the ABC board and its administration, and asserted the control act "will yield a fair amount of needed revenue to the State."

Mr. Goolrick added to the assertions of others the opinion that the board should abolish the slip signing requirement in the purchase of liquor from State stores.

The committee on legal education and admission to the bar recommended requirement of a minimum of professional as well as academic training for applicants for admission to the bar.

The 1934 General Assembly passed the bar association - sponsored amendment providing that bar applicants after July 1, 1935, must either have received a degree from an approved law school or have completed the equivalent of at least a two-year academic course in an accredited college, but the committee today reported it was unanimous in believing the alternative should not be included in this requirement.

Ask Curb on Drawing Wills.

Limitations on persons other than lawyers, or on agencies seeking to collect debts for others, were outlined by the committee on unauthorized practice of law. Restrictions thrown around the right of trust companies and banks to draw wills were reported, and the committee recommended that local committees cooperate with the courts in seeing that the laws covering both matters were properly enforced.

The legislative committee reported that 32 of its bills proposed to the 1934 General Assembly were passed and enacted into law.

Factional Fight In Both Parties At Hagerstown

Anti-Ritchie Leader Says Committee Ticket Will Be Filed.

Hagerstown, Md., Aug. 22 (Spl.). As the midnight closing hour for the filing of candidates in the September primary approached, a fight between factions in the Democratic and Republican parties appeared certain.

Dr. J. Hubert Wade, leader of the anti-Ritchie faction in Washington County, who is supporting the candidacy of Dr. Charles Conley, of Frederick, for the gubernatorial nomination, indicated that he would file a ticket for the Democratic State central committee.

Attorney General William Preston Lane, leader of the Ritchie faction here, also will file a complete slate of candidates for the central committee.

The older faction in the Republican party will file a complete list of candidates for the Republican State central committee, opposing the ticket headed by Dr. H. E. Tabler, of Hancock, filed several days ago. One faction of the Republican party here is supporting Harry Nice, Baltimore, seeking the gubernatorial nomination, and the "Old Guard" leaders are supporting Senator Phillip Lee Goldsborough.

Both factions of both parties are expected to file tickets for the House of Delegates.

Leon R. Yourtee, attorney, who filed for the Democratic State Senate nomination, announced today he had withdrawn in favor of Joseph D. Mish, and would file for the House of Delegates.

Others who had filed today were Edgar P. Eyler for Democratic nomination for register of wills; S. Rinehart Cohill, Democrat, for county commissioner, and D. Webster Groh, Democrat, for House of Delegates.

G. O. P. Elects 50 Delegates At Woodstock

To Represent Shenandoah County at Convention in Harrisonburg.

Woodstock, Va., Aug. 22 (Spl.).—Shenandoah County Republicans elected 50 delegates and a like number of alternates at a county convention at Narrow Passage Tavern last night to the district party convention in Harrisonburg, August 30, when the Republicans will select a candidate to oppose Representative A. Willis Robertson, of Lexington, Democrat incumbent, in November.

The delegation was not instructed, nor did the county convention put forward the name of a "favorite son" for the nomination.

A bitter factional fight deadlocked the convention early in the evening and it was not until after midnight that the delegates were selected. The fight occurred in the credentials commmittee when two delegations from New Market, one headed by C. W. Wickes and the other by J. E. Kingan, sought seats in the convention. The contest was carried to the convention floor where the Wickes delegation was seated. A bouquet later was tossed to the Kingan faction, however, when Kingan was elected a member of the county committee and Wickes was made a precinct chairman.

Ripley S. Walker, one of the speakers, appealed for party harmony. Other speakers denounced the Democratic Administration for its NRA and AAA policies. Delegate J. C. Hutcheson, of Shenandoah County, was lauded for his work in the State Legislature, especially in having auto license fees reduced.

J. Ray Miller, of Strasburg, was elected county chairman to succeed the late Col. R. N. Hoag. Resolutions on the death of Col. Hoag were adopted.

Other officers of the county committee include W. H. Ellifritts, vice chairman; R. B. Coffman, secretary, and W. B. French, treasurer.

Peggy came to us as a gift from a very dear friend. She was an airdale of splendid pedigree and great beauty.

One day she presented us with 11 puppies. Of course she was devoted to them and could not be persuaded to leave the shed where they lay in a box of straw.

When the litter was about 3 weeks old I went out to feed Peggy. I was startled to see her hurling the pups one at a time, as far from the box as possible with a shake of her head. Thinking she meant to harm them I hurried forward, but she growled menacingly. I called to Uncle Jack, working nearby. Then I heard a sound that made my blood run cold—the noise of a coiled rattlesnake.

Then I understood Peggy's rough treatment of her pups. She was trying to get them away from the danger. I called her frantically but she paid no heed. One of her litter still lay asleep in the box with the snake. Peggy ran back and forth to distract the snake's attention. The snake sprang at her, and its fangs missed her head by inches. Peg jumped in swiftly and bit the snake at the base of the head, killing it instantly. When I realized the duel was over I turned to Uncle Jack, who had remained motionless during the fight, spellbound at the dog's courage and loyalty to the pups.

Tip, a finely bred fox terrier, was reared on a Virginia farm, owned by Thomas Breen. From the time he could support himself on his dainty legs, he followed his master about the farm; in Tip's opinion, the master would be unable to regulate the farm work without Tip's presence and supervision. One corn-cutting day Tip dutifully followed his master and the two sons of the house to the fields.

After working a short time, the master, becoming warm, removed his vest and, throwing it on the ground, said carelessly to the dog, "Tip, take care of this for me." In the midst of the work a heavy rain fell and the men, thoroughly soaked, stopped work and hurried to the house. In their haste, the dog was overlooked and his absence was only noticed after the men had changed to dry clothing. However, they were not really alarmed until night came without the dog's appearance.

And so the next day the master, having forgotten the incident of the vest being left in Tip's care, searched every place but the right one for the dog.

On the third day the sun shone brightly; the men returned to the cornfields to finish their work, and there they found Tip, half starved, unable to rise, but still guarding his master's vest.

His name was Toodles. Long, floppy ears, short brown hair, a little more than medium size and the kindest and most understanding eyes ever belonging to a dog, were his physical assets. We were never able to determine just what his "make" might be.

Toodles adopted our family as his own after we threw him a few scraps in hopes of giving him strength to continue his journey through our neighborhood. When this failed, his unfailing devotion to my sister and myself soon won him a place in our family.

Everywhere we went Toodles followed and no amount of scolding could change his plans. When we went to church, Toodles would go along with the rest of the family and lie under the pew, never making a sound unless one of the inhabitants of his coat started moving, then thump, thump, thump on the floor a few times, and Toodles would be quiet again.

Vacation time came and mother packed us off to Baltimore, leaving Toodles in care of a kindly neighbor. We were never able to figure just how he knew it was Sunday unless by the ringing of the church bells, but when Sunday came, Toodles attended both morning and evening services, lying in his accustomed place, after walking eight blocks by himself.

Toodles' habit of attending church so impressed our minister that he later used him as an illustration in a sermon. This was at the Clarendon Methodist Church.

A tentative report of County Auditor Elmer F. Newell shows that at the end of July Arlington County had a cash balance of $239,995.09. Of this amount $21,461.69 was in the general fund, compared with a balance of $792.64 at the end of June.

During July $78,654 was received from the Public Works Administration in repayment of funds already expended in sewerage surveys. The first sewer construction funds also were received during the month through the sale of $200,000 of bonds at par value to the PWA, together with an accumulated interest of $866.67.

Other balances shown in the report were sewer construction funds, $102,504.43; sewer debt, $866.67; water operatons, $7,583.20; dog tax, $2,445.49; school operations, $3,836.81; school debt, $1,048.25; Falls Church School, $619.72, and Federal emergency relief, $785.87.

The Volunteer Firemen of Arlington County, Va., will participate in the Labor Day parade of the National Firemen's Association, to be held in Alexandria, Va., as a county fire department rather than as members of the separate units. This decision was reached at a meeting of the Arlington and Fairfax Counties Firemen's Association Tuesday night in the Ballston fire engine house. The county will be asked to supply a police escort.

The association turned down a recommendation of the field day and carnival committee that only pumpers of 500 and 600 gallon capacity be allowed to participate in the hook-up contest on September 8 and 15 for the Gloth Trophy Cup.

The association's annual carnival will be held September 3 to 15, inclusive.

National Park Is Proposed in Fairfax County

U. S. Discusses Terms for 3,000 Acre Tract on Accotink Creek.

Terms are being discussed by the Federal Government for acquisition of approximately 3,000 acres of land lying on Accotink Creek, in Mount Vernon and Lee Districts, Fairfax County, Va., betwen the Southern Railway and Rolling road, for the establishment of a proposed game preserve and public park.

Preliminary surveys of the area have been made and titles are being examined. According to statements of officials negotiating the project, two dams probably will be constructed on Accotink Creek, to create artificial lakes. Driveways will be built and camping grounds established.

A recently constructed State highway with a 50-foot right of way now runs through practically the center of the proposed park. Work of turning the proposed area, many acres of which are in virgin forest land, into a park, will be done by members of the Civilian Conservation Corps, if the project is approved by Government officials.

The tract is approximately 4 miles in length, with varying width, bordering on each side of Accotink Creek. Most of the land needed for the project is now owned by former United States Senator Joseph W. Bristow, who lives near Annandale, Fairfax County, and Frank C. Gillingham, of Springfield.

Fairfax Tree Trim Favored By Civic Body

Branches Interfere With Power Lines, Council Is Told.

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 126-J.

The Merrifield (Va.) Improvement Association has adopted a resolution requesting the town council of Fairfax to cooperate with the electric company in keeping the tree branches trimmed to prevent interference with the power lines.

The resolution states that the delay of the council in granting this permission in the past has imposed an unfair burden on the other communities served from the Fairfax substation. The electric company officials say that frequent interruptions in service during storms have been caused by the overhanging limbs of trees within the Fairfax corporation limits.

A letter has been received by the association from Chairman H. G. Shirley, of the State highway commission, stating that an investigation had been made as to the cost of widening the bridge on the Alexandria-Leesburg pike about a mile west of Falls Church. He wrote that the State did not have available funds for this project, but it would be considered by the commission as soon as funds are available. The narrow bridge has been the scene of numerous accidents. At last month's meeting of the association the commission was asked to eliminate the traffic hazard. State Highway Engineer R. I. Mount has been asked to improve Prosperity avenue so that it will be passable during the winter months.

The association's entertainment committee was requested to investigate the feasibility of sponsoring the play, "The Church Bazaar at Mulberry Corners" of the Guild of St. John's Episcopal Church at McLean.

Painful Confirmation.

On June 29 we printed an editorial under the title, "Check To Recovery," in which it was stated that:

Investment demand for new capital issues is discouraged by official endeavors to cut rates of interest on long-time securities, regardless of the state of the market. Relatively low rates can, of course, be asked of borrowers by a Government which is itself in a privileged position as borrower, able to issue tax-exempt obligations, and to avoid certain expenses and commissions entailed by private loan operations.

To attempt to depress interest charges, therefore, by undercutting a private financing agency, as the RFC is reported to have done in case of the B. & O., is doing the country a poor service. Such tactics tend to increase the public debt instead of diminishing the burdens on Treasury agencies. They tend to perpetuate the need for Government assistance and to delay indefinitely the hoped-for revival of normal business activity.

Unfortunately, events have confirmed the criticism made at the time. An issue of $50,000,000 put out under terms and conditions dictated by the RFC has been a flop. The Government had to take $13,000,000 out of the total issue, and the price declined below 94 as soon as the bonds were issued. The recovery staged since then has been modest.

The moral is that occasionally a Government official is not as good a judge of the bond market as the private banker. In this case the Baltimore & Ohio had arranged an issue with its bankers, to be sold for a small service charge, and it is understood that the transaction had been approved by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which has some knowledge, after all its experience, about prices and terms for railroad issues. Certainly the I. C. C. proved in this case a better judge of the propriety of what was suitable for the market, the railroad and the country than did the RFC.

The net result of the operation has been to discourage, retard and delay private financing of capital requirements, so needed for those capital goods activities which the Administration desires to stimulate. The salutary part of the incident lies in its demonstration that Government officials do not possess all of the wisdom, and private bankers all of the ignorance that lately has been so glowingly attributed to both.

The Type That Is Needed.

It seems probable that Senator David A. Reed will be called to the Pennsylvania post in the Republican National Committee left vacant by the death of William S. Vare. It is certain that this choice would strengthen the committee.

About Reed there is nothing of Vare. The latter was as thoroughgoing a "party-man" as, in his day, was the Duke of Wellington. But Vare at his highest never proved himself more than a skillful and unscrupulous city politician, whereas Reed is of vastly different metal. None of his political enemies has ever doubted his sincerity. He is a conservative by conviction, not by fiat. He has a lively intelligence, a keen power of logic, and his destructive criticism, carefully reasoned and concisely argued, is usually accompanied by constructive suggestion.

Republican or Democratic, no National Committee composed of second-rate politicians can lead its party to any destination worth the journey. Men whose political thinking is based on principles, not expediency, are needed if these party organizations are adequately to fulfill the functions for which they are designed.

Reassuring.

President Roosevelt's reported indorsement of the remarks made by Assistant Secretary of Commerce Dickinson at Providence last week carries a note of reassurance to business men throughout the country. It tends to offset the unfriendly connotations which many read into the President's recent address at Green Bay, Wis.

Mr. Dickinson developed the thesis that a high standard of living can be attained only if the economic system is operating smoothly. Higher wages and better living conditions for the masses are a result of expanding industrial activity. The element of growth and initiative, Mr. Dickinson said, is the vital spark for our industrial and economic life. Under our modern system of "free enterprise and private initiative" we have achieved a degree of economic productivity never before possible.

Having sketched the achievements of modern industry under private capitalism, Mr. Dickinson made this significant remark:

It is unthinkable that any program of recovery should aim to stifle or choke the sources and centers of enterprise and initiative from which recovery must spring, or that it should seek to close the door to the rewards of enterprise and initiative. * * * No fault can be found in the profit motive as a mainspring of economic effort. The abolition of profits is inconceivable in a democratic community. * * *

Of course, there is nothing new or even profound in this presentation of basic economic facts. Mr. Dickinson's remarks are significant largely because of many indications that New Deal spokesmen are apt to ignore these homely realities. Confidence should be substantially enhanced by this official assurance that "free enterprise will be permitted to go on and will be restricted only to the extent that is necessary for its own maintenance and perpetuation."

The American Liberty League.

The time and the place have both been awaiting some such development as the American Liberty League, establishment of which under the presidency of Jouett Shouse was announced here yesterday. And it is particularly gratifying that this non-partisan organization, with the aim of influencing legislation "as a result of its research and studies," should be making its debut as the fall election campaigns get under way. This serves to point the contrast between political and critical examination of the New Deal, the latter of which the league evidently seeks to further.

As indicated by its emphasis on the rights of property, which the league should be careful not to stress at the expense of less definable human values, the new organization promises to be essentially conservative in outlook. There is room for the effective presentation of this viewpoint, the more so because it has been so much subordinated in Washington during the past 18 months. Liberal, not to say radical, doctrines have had relatively unchallenged sway. Those now in operation, and those contemplated, will be the more successful for having to make headway in future against a critical analysis which can not be steam-rollered or vilified into unconvinced acquiescence.

The league's scheme of division into sections dealing with concrete problems confronting the average man should encourage membership. More important, it should help to keep the organization close to realities and away from those glittering generalities which flow so easily whenever and wherever the name of liberty is invoked. The existence of a labor division side by side with a bondholders division, for instance, will encourage helpful analysis of the extent to which these interests are mutual, and the extent to which they are diverse.

As is shown on every side, the recovery program has now passed the stage of initial development, has reached the stage where pruning, weeding and selecting are imperative. None is better placed than the Administration to realize how much in the way of eliminating inconsistences, of consolidating duplications, of terminating the unworkable, there is to do. In constructive advice along these lines the American Liberty League, assuming leadership of the character so far indicated, has opportunity to prove both of fundamental and long-range value.

"Distinguished Service."

The bands play, the flags wave and emotion runs riot when, after the war, Johnny comes marching home. Yet here's a man sauntering up and down the street, and there's a man polishing a bit of metal who also deserve our recognition. And this not less because for them bands rarely play, flags seldom wave and cheers are chary.

Detective Sergt. Brass, single-handed and under fire, captured three bandits at the Arlington Hotel. Sergt. Canton similarly took prisoner a trio of highwaymen. Firemen Sellers and Horan each rescued a woman from a burning house. Fireman Hazlewood jumped, clothed, into the Potomac and saved a drowning boy. The District Board of Awards has recommended these men for bravery decorations; will cite several of their colleagues because of other "outstanding services."

It is good that Soldier Johnny should receive the Government's D. S. Medal when he deserves it. But it is also right that the civic soldier of everyday life should be awarded earned decorations, and it is to be regretted that the bands and flags and cheers are not distributed so that he gets his share.

Debating The Issue.

Senator Hastings, of Delaware, chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee, has declined the proposal of Senator Lewis, of Illinois, chairman of the Democratic Senatorial Campaign Committee, that these two bodies arrange a joint debate. As was to be expected from Senator Lewis, his challenge was knightly; as was to be expected from Senator Hastings, his negative proves practical.

It is doubtful whether, outside the law courts, anybody is ever convinced by vocal debates. Even the Lincoln-Douglas controversies, so far as we can tell, changed few opinions.

This condition arises from the very nature of the set debate's whole theory. One of the world's greatest parliamentary schools is the Oxford Union, and not long ago professional patriots were anguished because, in a Union debate, the winners supported a resolution that "this house will not under any circumstances fight for king and country." Yet the 100 percenters were causelessly perturbed. They were unacquainted with the Union tradition whereby a victory is voted, not on the merits of argument, but on the mere skill of exposition. There was probably none among those Union winners who would have refused to drop his books for a musket had Britain next day gone to war.

And what the Oxford Union debates are in the extreme, all formal debates are in one degree or another. About all save the most spontaneous, at any rate, there is something academic, artificial, perhaps even insincere. The real issue is left in doubt, because the actual emphasis is habitually shifted from equity to adroitness. Debates, in short, are stimulating, provocative, often informative. But for the solution of burning issues they are a poor substitute for unemotional study and reflection.

Behind The Donovan Case.

Reinstatement of John Donovan in his former position as technical adviser in the NRA's Labor Advisory Board is a logical result of the operation of trade unionism within the NRA. The National Labor Relations Board found that Donovan had been dismissed chiefly because he led a delegation representing the NRA Union to the office of Gen. Johnson and demanded an appointment within 24 hours. In spite of the fact that Donovan's conduct was "injudicious and needlessly provocative," his summary dismissal for activities as president of the NRA Union was inconsistent with the law which the NRA is enforcing against private employers.

It is obvious, however, that this outcome is no happier than was the controversy which gave rise to it. Aside from the unpleasant personal contacts which Donovan's reinstatement implies, the decision of the Labor Relations Board tends to establish the theory of trade unionism as a means of adjusting personnel relations in the Government service. The board considered the case "as though we were dealing with an employer to whom section 7-a (of the National Recovery Act) applied." The comparison is not appropriate. Gen. Johnson himself is not an employer, but a servant of the Government. In the last analysis conditions of labor in the NRA are determined by Congress. Attempts to deal collectively with an administrative official whose authority is restricted by law must be carefully distinguished from the free bargaining between private employers and employes.

The entire muddle is at bottom a result of the haphazard personnel system adopted by Congress for the alphabetical agencies. Jobs have been distributed as political spoils. Having obtained their positions as political favors, employes have no recourse against arbitrary dismissal, except through unionism. The NRA Union is a poor substitute for a real merit system. But beyond that, the better it proves as a substitute the worse the prospects for the civil service.

Unfortunate rows of this sort may be expected to recur, perhaps the more so because of the present decision, so long as employes in the recovery organizations are denied the protection of the civil service. Obviously, the remedy is not bargaining between Government officials and their subordinates. It lies in extension of the merit system under which each employe may be judged according to the character of his work, while receiving adequate protection against the petty abuses common to all human organizations.

For the Labor Relations Board in this difficult decision, one must have sympathy. Its members were doubtless keenly conscious of the essential differences between this case and a normal industrial dispute. But the unnecessary issue having been posed they could do no other than apply section 7-a to a case where it was never properly applicable.

Paying For Streets.

After months of careful study the District Commissioners have decided to ask Congress to repeal the so-called Borland act, under which abutting property owners are required to pay 50 per cent of the cost of street paving. If the bill which is being drawn is enacted, street improvements, excepting curb and gutter work, will be entirely financed from the general fund.

In theory there is much to be said for assessment of at least part of paving costs against property owners who are immediately benefited by such improvements. Especially is this true in new subdivisions where the streets are used almost exclusively by residents. But in actual practice the Borland law has not worked satisfactorily in the District. Street improvements often redound chiefly to the benefit of the motoring public, and occasionally to the detriment of the abutting property owner who does not favor heavier traffic in front of his home.

No means has been devised whereby inequities could be eliminated from operation of this law. In the first place assessments are made on the basis of front footage, which is not always logical. In the second place, the cost which the property owner must pay depends upon the width of the street and the type of paving used. These factors in turn are determined by the potential traffic on the street, and not by the benefits which the improvement will yield to the citizens paying for it.

Some inequities would also be encountered under the proposed plan, but they would seem to be less acute. When all factors are considered it appears that the financing of street improvements from the general fund would better serve the needs of the District.

The Post welcomes letters from its readers. All communications must be signed with the writer's name and address. Upon publication initials or pen names will be used if requested. Letters are subject to condensation and in no case should they exceed 250 words.

The Need of the Day.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to congratulate you for the courageous and level-headed way in which you refuse to be intimidated by the minority groups which seem to be intent on forcing their short-sighted and dangerous policy of an ostrich-like psychology upon the rest of us. No evil can be successfully combated by the childish expedient of refusing to face it, nor can any new thing be properly evaluated by this method.

Catherine the Great, of Russia, refused for 20 years to recognize this country on the grounds that to do so would encourage liberalism in her country. Whether or not she succeeded is now a matter of history. Is it not possible that by the courageous facing of new ideas and facts much violence might have been avoided and could be avoided in the future? Anything which is removed from the clear light of reason and deprived of the discipline of rubbing up against opposing views is apt to grow in a distorted fashion.

One American example of the results of this infantile belief that what you refuse to believe will cease to be is recent enough to serve us here; our ancestors used this method in combating what they believed to be an evil, namely, sex. What was the result? A deluge of sex-ridden and filthy books, plays and conversation. Let us learn our lesson now, before all ability to face facts without emotion has left us, and let us bring out into the open all the new ideas which seem to challenge our most time-honored beliefs.

Could we not have an open comparison of the constitutions of each of several countries, say Russia, as representing communism; Germany as representing fascism and our own Constitution and the Declaration of Independece, which it was framed to defend, for comparison? Even our college graduates seem to be somewhat at variance over the meaning of these documents, and it seems to me that a sounder knowledge of just what our Government is founded on is the crying need of the day. DOROTHY LANE.
Washington, Aug. 16.

Easy Aliens.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Would you believe that only a small per cent of your readers know that an alien who gets across the border legitimately may stay here forever without taking out naturalization papers? If they were in Europe, they would find, as I did, that they would be registered in four hours, from whence they came, and where they were going, and the police department would be around often enough to keep a permanent check.

I never was in any country where the police did not keep a close record of my goings and comings until I was safely on the ship to be returned to America. The aliens in America have all the privileges of American citizens and the honest-to-goodness Americans have to take all the responsibility. Is it fair?
C. H.
Washington, Aug. 13.

"Poor Men's Club."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Every citizen of Washington and vicinity should commend the D. C. Commissioners and the officials of nearby States for their honest endeavor to enforce the liquor laws as per repeal promises. However, one correspondent says we should have bars on every corner, as the bar is the poor man's club and the only place he can spend an enjoyable evening.

With the radio, fine theaters, bowling alleys, boxing bouts and respectable night clubs, why should any one wish these dives back? The extinction of the saloon has been a blessing and a benediction that no lover of truth, of humanity, or of souls would knowingly attempt to deny, decry or diminish.
E. D. VERNON.
Alexandria, Va., Aug. 15.

He Needs No Other.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: For some time I have been fighting the temptation to write you in praise of the "new Post," but after reading the recent leading editorial discussing Priestly's "English Journey," I can not resist any longer. The paper is good from the first to last page.

Before the advent of Mr. Meyer in the Washington newspaper world I read the New York Times and New York Herald Tribune for authoritative Washington and foreign comment and an interesting editorial page. Now I can read my morning Post, without any recourse to other papers, and rest contented that I am abreast of the world news.

More power to you!
NORMAN P. GUNN.
Washington, Aug. 20.

Constitutional Oratory.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since the depression, which has so adversely affected public education appropriations, there has been an increasing demand by educators and others that more time in schools be given to the study of the Federal Constitution. Perhaps the educators have stressed this demand because political administrative agencies have generally cut school appropriations among the first in the spirit of economy.

Others, no doubt, were excited to make this demand because they feared the coming generation would be led astray by communistic propaganda, the New Deal ventures and the turmoil in Europe and Asia.

Constitutions are lifeless things until given a "shot in the arm"—and then they become as interesting as life itself. Orators, when they have a real live issue, certainly can make a constitution do tricks.

If only the school boards would hire orators instead of condemning students to read textbooks on constitutions (written as recently as March 4, 1933), they would get a better understanding of what our Constitution means.
GROVER AYRES.
Washington.

Passersby.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Although Washington's torrid heat has somewhat abated, there is still plenty of time for a recurrence of those days which seem to exhaust all one's energies merely to exist. We human beings somehow manage to quench our thirst and cool off in various ways according to our financial status. But how many of us think of our city's outdoor animals, birds and squirrels, homeless dogs and alley cats and the hard-working horses forced to exist and serve us in the artificial surroundings of our hot alleys and streets, who have no way of asking for relief?

These horse fountains can allay the thirst of small animals and birds in the vicinity as well, but there is scarcely a drop of fresh water provided in the miles and miles of the city's back alleys for the poor stray cats and dogs. The least anyone can do, even though he will not feed them or rescue them, is to keep a pan of fresh water available in back or front for any passing creature, or if he has any sort of lawn, a bird bath should be provided.
VIRGINIA W. SARGENT,
President, Animal Relief and Humane Education League.

The Price of Security.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is neither just nor proper to place the responsibility for crime waves upon the heads of the officers of the law. "Except the Lord keep the city, the watchman waketh in vain," is just as true now as when the words of that eternal truth were penned thousands of years ago.

The lavish expenditure of borrowed money in an effort to turn aside profligacy does no more than to establish a "rogues' carnival" as far as success may be reasonably hoped for.

The remedy lies in repentance on the part of the people. Then a realization of the promises of God is certain. It is God above that giveth the rain in His season, and rebukes the devouring plague, and the pestilence. The reception of all these priceless benefits is conditional, but compliance with the conditions is easily and abundantly in the hands of each and every person. No creature can any more live without God in his life than he can without food, water, and air. All that the Lord asks in return is a decent attitude of gratitude and obedience to that which we already know to be just and right between man and man.

CHARLES T. SHAFFER.
Carmody Hills, Md., Aug. 16.

Reviving An Ancient Tongue.

One of Eamon de Valera's objectives in the government of the Irish Free State has been the revival of Gaelic as a language for common use. To that end his Ministry of Education has been active in the schools and the institutions of higher learning, promoting the study of Gaelic by compulsion. In government services Gaelic is recognized as the official language, and in addressing the Celtic Congress recently assembled in Dublin Mr. de Valera pledged himself to broaden its use.

What Mr. de Valera has in mind is not the extermination of English so much as the restoration of Gaelic to a position of predominance in a bi-lingual state. That this will be a difficult job he himself admits. A similar admission was made last week by Dr. Douglas Hyde, one of the foremost authorities on the Gaelic tongue and Gaelic culture, in addressing the Celtic Congress. Dr. Hyde pointed out that the Gaelic enthusiasts had on one side of them "the devil of England" and on the other the "deep sea of America," each penetrating Ireland with newspapers, travelers and moving pictures, all promoting the continued use of English as a vehicle of common intercourse.

The Province of Quebec, in canada, affords perhaps the best example in the world of an ancient language resisting the encroachments of an alien tongue. The courts and the legislature of Quebec use both English and French, and English predominates in the great City of Montreal and in some of the counties east of the St. Lawrence. But throughout most of the province French remains the common language of conversation and to a considerable degree the language of business.

If Ireland had enjoyed the freedom from external influence that has been the portion of Quebec for many years there might be no need today to encourage the revival of Gaelic. English rule has departed utterly from the Free State, but the English tongue, fostered by influences stronger than that of government, remains as a necessity and a convenience. It may be denied official recognition. It may be subordinated in education. But it is never likely to be displaced in common usage by Gaelic so long as Irish ports are open to British trade and Irish industry and finance maintain British connections.

The Post Impressionist

Once Upon A Time.

Postoffice, Thursday.

WE have long suspected it. Last evening we began to supplement suspicion by verification.

In the unperishable records of immortal Sherlock Holmes there are buried problems more baffling than any the Genius of Baker Street himself solves for our insatiable delight.

Our yesterday's Column on the Great Holmes Heresy moved some friends to call attention to a few of these enigmas. We turned to the text and came across a few instances on our own hook.

We don't mean the rare cases that were brought to Holmes in the course of his professional duties and admittedly frustrated his talents. We don't mean the tantalizing titbits to which appetite-baiting Watson refers merely in passing: those titillatingly entitled adventures of which he makes casual mention, and to which he never refers thereafter.

We mean such matters as certain unexplained marvels of time.

Consider, for instance, "The Sign of the Four," its second chapter—the year of 1888.

Here we are in the historic consulting and common room. Who hasn't been there? Who does not love that disordered spot, where, to the distraction of Watson's tidy soul, Holmes keeps his tobacco in a Persian slipper, files his unanswered letters by the simple method of immolation upon a case knife? What dramas have we not seen enacted there? And who will not return to see them enacted again and again? . . .

But Miss Morstan—happy woman—is now entering the apartment for the first time. She brings that missive which may contain the answer to the puzzle of the "large and lustrous" pearls. Says she:

"This morning I received this letter."

That same morning, mark you!

Well, Holmes first examines the envelope. ("You know my methods, Watson.") Nothing can escape his searching eye, can it? He announces:

"Postmark, London, S. W.; date, July 7. Hum!"

July 7: that same morning.

But read seven pages on. They bring you only to the end of that day. Biographer Watson leaves no doubt that any more than an afternoon has passed. Yet he says:

"It was a September evening."

Einstein July has surreptitiously blended into fourth-dimension September.

* * *

Here, we submit, is a mystery more mysterious than that of Mary Morstan's father and the strange advertisement. Those criminal complications Sherlock Holmes was to unravel. But nor he, nor his fair client, nor yet the meticulous chronicler sems so much as to have remarked this staggering complexity.

Why not?

* * *

Of course, drugs do queer things to people. The clock has no existence for the "addict." And that very morning—at least, on the morning of July 7—the great man had been indulging his little vice:

"Sherlock Holmes took his bottle . . . and his hypodermic syringe . . . thrust the sharp point home, pressed down the tiny piston, and sank back with a long sigh."

But he was wide enough awake during the subsequent Marstan interview!

* * *

Of course, too, historian Watson was scarcely himself that day. He admits that he "never looked upon a face which gave clearer promise of a refined and sensitive nature" than Miss Morstan's:

"My mind ran upon . . . her smiles, the deep, rich tones of her voice . . ."

In short, he had just fallen in love at first sight—and what he would assuredly have called "the tender passion" can be every bit as time-destructive as any "drowsy sirup of the East."

Yet he wrote these archives long after the event!

* * *

Finally, there remains Miss Morstan herself. We gather from subsequent records that she was essentially a "wholesome" woman. But on this dubious day "her lip trembled, and she showed every sign of intense inward agitation."

An acquaintance has told us of an always, before and since, normal girl whose parents, sight-seeing the Antwerp Cathedral, sent her back to their five-minutes' distant hotel to fetch a forgotten purse. When she returned with it, they said she had been gone two hours, yet she has never been able to account to herself for any lapse of 120 minutes. Nor was there "intense inward agitation" in her case, either.

But if it was only Miss Morstan that slipped out of time into eternity, and back again, why didn't Holmes and Watson notice it? And to assume that all three slipped simultaneously, and for separate reasons, would be to strain coincidence too far.

* * *

From "The Memoirs" we learn that Holmes disappeared at Reichenbach in 1891. "The Return" informs us that he did not reappear until "the spring of 1894." Yet in "His Last Bow" we find him actively and openly—and with no amazement on the part of readily amazed Watson—engaged on the Scott Eccles affair "toward the end of March in the year 1892."

* * *

Holmes always averred that he went from Switzerland to Lhassa. We have heard Holmes Heretics suggest that, a secret criminal, he was really in prison, under an alias, during the absence that his Boswell so provocatively described. But what explanation can be offered for this 1892 participation in this matter, of Eccles and Wistaria Lodge?

Barging Through Europe With Carlisle Bargeron

What a Hot-Dog!

HAMBURG, Germany.—Dear Aleck: I am so excite, as we French say. I didn't want you to think, Aleck, that I am all one-sided and interested in only the light things of life. So this afternoon I went in search of art. You know, Aleck, I wanted to get at the soul of a people. Well, Aleck, I ran across the finest hot-dog you ever saw. I was so pleasingly surprised because you know one is so often disappointed when he associates a country with a particular art and finds that it is wholly an American version, like, for example, when you go hunting for chop suey in China.

BARGERON

For stream lines and symmetry, Aleck, this was the most beautiful hot-dog I had ever seen, and not to be too unartistic, about the size of a policeman's club. The one I got, Aleck, I was told, is the father of all the little American hot-dogs. Of course, you can't believe everything these foreign salesman tell us Americans but I will say that this hot-dog is capable of being the father of all hot-dogs everywhere. To emphasize, Aleck, it IS a hot-dog.

• • • •

You may say, Aleck, that I am a fine one to go into such ecstacy over a hot-dog but I want to tell you that I admire anything that excels, like I admire Babe Ruth, not because I ever go to a baseball game, but because in his chosen line he has reached the top. Well, Aleck, here is a hot-dog that I will put up against any hot-dog anywhere. Among hot-dogs it is without a peer.

Aleck, it is so big that no roll will encompass it, maybe a loaf of bread, but no mere roll. Stuck in a roll it stands out at both ends like the Leviathan alongside a tug. One eats upon it for days and days before he even approaches the roll and it takes a hogshead of mustard to smear it. We could not raise such hot-dogs in the States, of course, because we could not support them, though I hope some day that our Yankee ingenuity will be able to overcome all obstacles and that we shall have the biggest hot-dog in all the world, the size of the Washington Monument, for example.

• • • •

It broadens one so, Aleck, to travel and study the arts of other people. Provincial Americans are too inclined to brag about their bathtubs and, at one time, about a chicken in every pot. Well, when I see a hot-dog like this, Aleck, I realize that the world is a very big place and that we are not the only peobles on the beach.

It is not as if this were some big, bolsterous, unrefined hot-dog. Notwithstanding its size it would be at home in any drawing room. It has the fiber of centuries in its veins, Aleck. I am told that its family tree goes back way beyond Bismarck. And while I say that you can't believe everything the foreigners tell us, the fact that this hot-dog after generations and generations still has its stature when the stature of even man has diminished, well one can believe that this hot-dog inherits the sturdiness of the great race that first settled this country.

• • • •

As I contemplate its massive strength, Aleck, there is only one matter in which I can feel a pride for my own country. It is the great industry we have developed for writing the Lord's prayer or Lincoln's Gettysburg address on a small dime. Some of our engravers can do this, you know. One has to look through a glass to be able to read it.

What one of those fellows could write on this hot-dog is nobody's business. Why, he could write all of the articles which the Roosevelts have written for the magazines. The owner of this hot-dog could not do that. He said he did not believe anyone in all Germany could.

He did autograph it for me, though, Aleck. You know how accomplished we autograph hunters are.

Tammany to Play Part In Speakership Race

New York's 28 Votes May Mean Defeat or Victory for Any One of Many Candidates; Close Race Is Predicted.

By Robert C. Albright.

TAMMANY'S smiling tiger, which played an unexpectedly decisive role in the election of Speaker Rainey, will have its padded paws deep in the Congressional jackpot that determines his successor.

This simple fact was obviously apparent yesterday, as party deals and sectional alignments to capture the powerful House gavel indicated a closer run-off for the high honor than was at first presaged.

Thomas H. Cullen, House Tammany chieftain, who won for himself and the New York delegation an assistant floor leadership in the last House organization, is an astute trader, who has nothing to say for the time being.

Expected to Keep Mum.

If he runs true to Tammany form, he will be continuously silent until the eve of the January Speakership elections, when the 28 votes his delegation wields may spell victory or defeat for a number of candidates for major House offices.

Despite the four-month interval before Congress convenes, behind-the-scenes negotiations in the Speakership contest already are actively under way, and will be intensified today following return of the funeral train from the home of the late Speaker.

Returning with the President's party may be House Democratic Leader Joseph W. Byrns and lesser aspirants to the Speaker's office, although this was still undetermined last night.

Representative Byrns, who has not yet formally announced his candidacy, nevertheless has a conceded edge on all of his fellows, and it is the opinion of his friends he intends to leave no stone unturned to hold it.

Byrns' Return Seen.

Byrns had not intended returning to Washington until September Capitol observers, however, noting Representative John Rankin's entry into the race, and Representative John McDuffie's support of William B. Bankhead's candidacy, believe he will return at once.

At least one prominent Tammanyite will stop over in Washington after the Speaker's funeral—Representative John J. O'Connor, who conducted a lone wolf campaign for the Speakership in the last Congress.

A member of Tammany, O'Connor is still an independent, and is expected to announce himself for the office with or without Tammany support. His delegation gave him no backing in the last contest.

It is the opinion of observers that Bankhead will loom as Byrns' strongest opponent, and that both will have to bargain heavily with Northern and Western Democrats if they hope to win.

It is in this connection that Tammany and those close to it must be considered. Among the suggested alignments has been Representative James M. Mead, of New York, on the ticket for leader with Representative Byrns.

Close Bargain Seen.

Not strictly a member of the Tammany bloc, Mead usually goes along with the delegation, and is popular with its members. At the same time, he is free of war paint and feathers. Representative Cullen, however, is likely to insist on more material recognition than either minor preferment for Mead or even O'Connor could give.

With the posts not only of Speaker and leader, but of assistant leader, whip, head of the Democratic steering committee, and chairman of a half-dozen regular House committees, now vacant, there will be ample material for bargaining, and all hands are expected to take full advantage of that fact. There will be sectional and personal deals, and the honors may go to those who make the wisest bargains.

A sign from the White House could decide the race once and for all, but observant members believe the President will keep hands off as he did in the last contest. There will be many attempts, regardless, to invoke his blessing, and to point with pride to favors shown.

A prospective reduction in the ranks of House Democrats by 30 or 40 seats, likewise, will have its effect on the outcome, and increase the bargaining power of already established blocs. And Tammany is not the least of these.

Virginia Assault Victim Is Buried

Stepson Held at Staunton for Killing.

Harrisonburg, Va., Aug. 22 (Spl.). Funeral services for Early Huffman, 47, former Harrisonburg resident who was fatally injured at his home near Staunton Saturday night when struck over the head by his stepson, John Marshall, were held here yesterday afternoon, Dr. James W. Wright, of the First United Brethren Church, officiating. Interment was in Woodbine.

Marshall is being held in the Staunton Jail and faces murder charges. He told Augusta County officers he hit Huffman in self-defense after the latter threw cups and saucers at him and his mother. He claimed also that Huffman attempted to obtain a revolver from a locked closet. Officers later obtained the gun, but there were no cartridges in it.

Clarke County Officials Seeking Identity.

Winchester, Va., Aug. 22 (Spl.).—The body of an unidentified man was found near the Berrys Ferry bridge, which crosses the Shenandoah River about 15 miles east of here, this afternoon. Campers discovered the body caught in a tree limb in the water.

Dr. C. H. Iden, Berryville, Clarke County coroner, said the man had probably been dead more than ten days. He said his clothes bore no identification marks. The man was described as being about 35 years old, 5 feet 8 inches tall, and weighing 150 pounds.

The remains were taken to an undertaking establishment at Berryville. Authorities here stated that they had received no reports of missing persons which might give a clew to the man's identity.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

Pack My Bag.

FAR be it from me to say that New Hampshire is a desert island—but, in the age-old query ever since there was more than one book in the world, what reading - matter shall I choose to take with me as I set off?

THEO. HALL.

I've picked three books, just the sort which are regretfully likely to be squeezed out of daily reviewing. They're big books and serious—but I'm being canny in that. Nothing could be better to set off to advantage the delights of paddling a canoe.

The first is Lewis Mumford's "The Golden Day." Printed originally in 1926, it now comes in Norton's White Oak Library ($2). All these years I've missed it, for some reason, and now I'm going to catch up.

• • • •

Mr. Mumford has a golden dream of American life to come. Last spring, in "Technics and Civilization," he told us the implications from industry and mechanics. In an early volume, "Sticks and Stones," he worked out a description of America and the path ahead through the evidence of our architecture. In the present volume, he does the same thing by means of our writers and philosophers.

I open the book at random—well, nearly at random—to catch a hint of what he offers. Hear this characteristic bit on the figures in Mr. Dreiser's novels: "One thing bobs up; another falls down; and in the long run none of their affairs, financial or sexual, are of any consequence. It is a picture of society; yes; but so is the Sunday newspaper."

Or this spanking of John Dewey: "What Mr. Dewey has done in part has been to bolster up and confirm by philosophic statement tendencies which are already strong and well established in American life, whereas he has been apathetic or diffident about things which must still be introduced into our scheme of things if it is to become thoroughly humane and significant."

Yes, I think I am going to like this sharp but rather romantic temper of Mr. Mumford's.

• • • •

Second is a book I make bold to say can not be left unread by any American who hopes in time to understand his country. Charles and Mary Beard's "The Rise of American Civilization" is a work of immense size, learning, good sense, and intellectual penetration. It has been continually revised and enlarged since 1927. Now it appears, with all maps and the vast bibliography, in a one-volume college edition (MacMillan, $3.50)—more book, and more of the above qualities, for the money than one could meet elsewhere in a month of Sundays.

From the colonial era to "technocracy" it surveys America with emphasis on social and economic developments. Tart and outspoken, it notices much which other histories ignore. Here, for example, is what the authors say on modern book reviewing:

"Hovering around the circle of creative artists working at letters was a swarm of critics, more numerous perhaps than in any other country. The multiplication of book reviews and the clamor of printers for copy to fill space, while calling forth some essayists of penetrating power, gave employment to a motley assembly of writers who in less prosperous lands would have been relegated to the mechanical trades. In this general drift, much of the business of literary evaluation passed into the hands of professors trained in the forms of letters rather than learned in the substance of the civilization that produced them. No small part of the appraising that escaped the professors was done by amateurs recruited from journalism, who, if they had a colleg training at all, were unschooled in any discipline, classical or modern. So between those who brought academic arts to bear on beautiful letters and those who relied on nimble wits and clever newspaper tricks, literary criticism became mainly a craft of the higher verbalism."

Of course, damned be he who first cries "ouch!"

But I don't know any book which promises a better approach to that "substance" than this by Mr. and Mrs. Beard, of New Milford, Conn.

• • • •

For third choice, what could be more proper—or more trite—than to take along Shakespeare? But I don't mean the plays. For Harley Granville-Barker and G. B. Harrison, British scholars, have edited a really remarkable symposium on the best modern understanding of the life, works, and time of our premier dramatist—"A Companion to Shakespeare Studies" (Macmillan, $3).

Judge of the range and caliber by some of these topics with author: Shapespeare's Life, J. W. Mackail; S. as poet, George Rylands; S. and music, Edward J. Dent; S's. sources, A. L. Attwater; S's text, A. W. Pollard; and S. criticism from Dryden to Coleridge, T. S. Eliot. Each angle covered is by an expert. I understand that the editors have endeavored to leave out all moot points, to include only the most authoritative results of scholarship. In one of the most widely aired and controversial fields in the world, it will be a relief to know what we may take as definite.

If you're off to your own "desert island," your choices may not agree with mine. But if you read along with me, we'd at least have 2,418 pages to keep us out of mischief during the next two weeks.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Queer Fish.

("Prof. William Beebe dives to record depths in bathysphere and reports many new species of fish."—News item.)

Mr. Elmer Twitchell, never to be outdone by anybody, took a dive in his own bathysphere "The Underseas Walter Winchell" yesterday and came up, unfortunately, with the following report on queer denizens, as the saying is, of the deep:

Communist Shrimp.—Only pink shrimp (before cooking) ever recorded. Changes its color by whirling around at such speed that the water gets hot and comes to a boil. Has no nostrils, which is a darned good break. Lives sedentary life and can never be raised in captivity.

• • • •

The Kinked Eel.—Has so much acid in its system its body has lost all pliability. Being unable to squirm, it is in a pathetic state of despondency and spends its time envying eels that can still live in an old boot. No good for food, but when captured and allowed to harden it makes an excellent crank for auto engine.

• • • •

Boneless Shad.—The answer to a fish lover's prayer. This shad was discovered at a depth of two miles, a new low for the movement. It was going lower at high speed, realizing that, once discovered, it would face pursuit for the rest of its life.

• • • •

Nudity Cult Lobster.—Here's one for the book, boys. It's a lobster that has gone modern and shed its shell. The brazen creature goes around without a stitch on and is the talk of the sea. It is a long-hoped for discovery, however, as it can be cooked in a few seconds and eaten without the use of nutcrackers, hammers or rocks.

• • • •

Quick-Lunch Mackerel.—A curious fish. Very undernourished and comes with parsley and slice of lemon attached to its dorsal fin. Tastes awful, and will, therefore, delight most restaurant men.

• • • •

The What-Am-I?—This is one of the queerest of all sea creatures. It is half worm and half fish. As the half that is fish is always chasing the half that is worm, and as the half that is worm is always worried, the What-Am-I spends its entire life in a state of jitters and goes to an early grave.

German election campaigner.—I just dropped in to see if you were going to vote for Hitler or vote for Hitler?

Not Dorothy nor Prue,
Nor Edith—that's one way to tell
Who's Sue.

• • • •

But it's too negative by far
To introduce to you,
The quite unique and sparkling star
Who's Sue.

• • • •

Alack, she knows I feel that way,
And does she make me blue?
I'll up and show the wench some day
Who's Sue.

Charlottesville Building Gains

Dozen Jobs Are Expected to Start Within a Week.

Charlottesville, Va., Aug. 22 (Spl.).—Permits granted by the city yesterday for five building jobs to cost $22,200 have swelled construction work here far beyond the usual August average. Within a week carpenters and masons will be busy on a dozen building projects, including the University of Virginia art museum and $378,000 group of engineering buildings.

A sudden rush to erect homes and automobile stations has since last Wednesday brought permits totaling $28,200 from Building Inspector Franklin Davis' office. The total for August tonight stood at $35,310 and a license for a gasoline supply depot will raise this figure by $2,000 before the end of this week. This equals all the private building work done here since the middle of the spring.

Albemarle Motors, Inc., yesterday began construction of a two-story brick garage at a cost of $17,000 and on the same day Irving & Robinson secured a permit for a building to house a filling station and cleaning establishment. License to build a $1,000 warehouse addition was granted Commissioner George Huff. Permits for four new homes, costing $11,200, also have been issued.

Group at Cresaptown Fights Incorporation

Cresaptown, Md., Aug. 22 (Spl.). Believing it would bring too much expense upon property owners in a scattered community, 65 taxpayers of Cresaptown last night voted against incorporating the town, as was urged by the Cresaptown Fire Department. Rejection was offered after a study of the proposition the last few weeks.

The property owners appointed John B. Gunning as chairman of a committee of five to appear before the board of county commissioners and also the Alleghany County Board of Health. Chairman Gunning said the committee would ask the county to improve sewer conditions and the water system.

The National Gallery

JOHN EDGAR HOOVER, Director of the Division of Investigation, Department of Justice. No "gumshoe detective," he is mild as milk; tall, dark, quiet and looks like a prosperous banker. Such worthies as Emma Goldman, John Dillinger and "Machine Gun" Kelly learned to respect and steer wide of his men, who operate with 4,500,000 fingerprints. Local boy made good, he entered Government service through Library of Congress. Conscientious, forceful, contemptuous of "tough guys," his job is to retain upper hand over crime. A bachelor, he collects antiques, original cartoons relating to crime, and swings a racquet now and then. While criminals sleep he works. When they are behind bars, he sleeps.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Rogue's Property Protected by Laws That Punish Rogues

By Robert Quillen

Where there is no law there can be no lawlessness. And where there is no God there can be no sin.

Since this is obviously true, it follows that a world without belief in God would be a world without any reason to refrain from the acts that are now called sinful.

It is commonly conceded that the fear of God does more than any other influence to keep mankind from evil.

How, then, would man conduct himself if none believed in God or a future life?

Fear would continue to restrain him, but it would be a fear of other men.

His first concern would be his own survival, and to make himself secure he would join other men in forming a government. He would approve laws to protect life and property, for he would need such protection. And he would fear the law and pay it lip service.

But with only one short life to live and no hope of reward for self-denial, he would feel bound by no law except his own desire.

He would expect the fittest to survive, for any other rule would be stupid.

Does that mean he would arm himself with machine guns and take by force the things he desired? Certainly not. If he openly made himself a menace, other men would unite against him and hang him. He would prove himself unfit by failing to survive.

But without any scruple, except that inspired by fear of force, he would feather his nest and gratify his desires by cunning and stealth or any other means within his power. Discretion alone would restrain him.

But if that is true, you will say, why is it that unbelievers do not loot the world now?

The answer is that many do. But those who completely reject the idea of a Supreme Being are few, and these are restrained, as all men are, by the force of public opinion.

The man who doesn't believe in honesty is safe so long as he lives among men who do.

Daily Talk About Books and Authors

An English Woman Lecturer in America.

Mr. James B. Pond, son of the famous Maj. Pond, says he and his father have imported many British lecturers on the hoof. I would give the exact number if I could remember it, but it is just as well I have forgotten it, for no one would believe such a high figure could be correct. For over 100 years British authors have been coming to the United States to satisfy the curiosity of American readers of their books. I confess I share to a certain extent in this feeling; it is always a pleasure and a matter of interest to see and hear anyone whose books I have read with enthusiasm. I am not in the least ashamed of this curiosity; I glory in it, being a natural-born hero worshipper. Only they must be heroes.

But the question most frequently asked of these visitors does not interest me in the least. They have hardly got off the ship when they are asked: "What do you think of our country?" Now I can say in all sincerity that I don't care a tinker's word what they think of America or of Americans. They are not sufficiently informed on this subject to have any opinion worth hearing. Whenever I have an opportunity to ask them anything, I ask them about conditions in their own country; for the only object in asking a question (if you are not a lawyer) is to learn something.

One of the most agreeable of recent British authors who have come hither to talk is the popular novelist who writes under the name of E. M. Delafield. She is Elizabeth M. Dashwood (Mrs. Arthur Paul Dashwood); her father-in-law is a baronet.

And as I write these words it occurs to me for the first time that this is the lady with whom I played tennis in 1928 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Granville-Barker in Devonshire! Well, well! She was very attractive, and should practice her forehand stroke a little more assiduously.

Her new book is modestly and wittily called "The Provincial Lady in America." She owns a cat named Helen Wills and a dog named Kolynos. This interests me, because there is a cat in North Carolina named after me; and a few years ago I owned an imaginary cat, to which I gave the name Kolynos, not dreaming that anyone else had ever thought of that name for a household animal.

This book is not a survey of America. It is a diary recording her own experiences with places and persons, and is one continuous effervescence of humor and wit and fun—it is noteworthy that she can keep up this apparently spontaneous flow of persiflage for 245 pages without ever becoming dull; but I believe she could go on for a thousand.

It is continuous entertainment for the reader. When asked if she wishes to see the night-life in Harlem, she tries "not to remember that the night-life to which I am accustomed begins with letting out the cat at half-past ten and winding the cuckoo-clock, and ends with going straight to bed and to sleep until 8 o'clock next morning."

More Distinguished Films Are Definitely Announced for Local Fall Screening

Warners Make Known Actual Playing Dates

Next Two Months Notable; Godfrey Pulls Surprise; Amusement Chatter.

By Nelson B. Bell.

Substantiating, and making definite, yesterday's ambiguities with regard to the lustrous offerings that may be expected on the screens and stages of the Warner Brothers' Washington theaters this fall, announcement of specific bookings was made yesterday by John J. Payette, general manager of the Warner Brothers' interests in this territory.

This list of "wonder attractions" will be inaugurated Friday, August 31, by first local showings of "She Loves Me Not," a Paramount production, in which Bing Crosby is the star, supported by Miriam Hopkins and Kitty Carlisle, last seen in Earl Carroll's "Murder at the Vanities," opposite Carl Brisson.

The following week, Friday, September 7, will come one of the notable productions of the year, if advance reports are to be relied upon in the slightest degree—First National's picturization of R. H. Bruce Lockhart's absorbing story of "British Agent." In this utterly frank relation of the adventures of a consular agent in Russia during one of the most critical periods in world history, the principal roles are played by Leslie Howard and Kay Francis, supported by William Gargan, Irving Pichel, Halliwell Hobbes, Ivan Simpson, J. Carroll Naish, Walter Byron and Doris Lloyd.

Another Big Musical.

Beginning Friday, September 14, the Earle will present Dick Powell, Ruby Keeler, Joan Blondell, ZaSu Pitts, Guy Kibbee and Hugh Herbert in "Dames," heralded as the legitimate successor to power, glory and tunefulness enjoyed by "Forty-second Street." Busby Berkeley created and staged the ensemble effects in this subject—said to be his greatest.

The following week, September 21, will see "Desirable" the chief attraction at the Earle, with Jean Muir, George Brent, Verree Teasdale, Charles Starrett and John Halliday in the featured spots. This is a story of Broadway's theatrical life, with a background of swank society.

For the last week in September, beginning the twenty-eighth, Gary Cooper, Carole Lombard and Shirley Temple will occupy the Earle's silver sheet in "Now and Forever," the exciting story of the romance and wanderlust of three unusual people.

During the month of October the following screen attractions will be seen in the Warners' Thirteenth street house, but not necessarily in the order named:

"Madame Du Barry," starring Dolores Del Rio, with Reginald Owen, Verree Teasdale, Victor Jory, Osgood Perkins and '17 other featured players in support; Mae West in "Belle of the Nineties," with Roger Pryor; "The Scarlet Empress," Josef Von Sternberg's massive production of the story of Catherine the Great of Russia, starring Marlene Dietrich, supported by John Lodge, Louise Dresser and hosts of others. This picture is said to reveal an entirely new treatment of dramatic narrative, music and spectacle.

In Market For Acts.

With these feature pictures as a nucleus, the local Warner organization, under Mr. Payette's direction, is scouring the country for living stage acts of the first rank to complete what he declares will be the most notable entertainments in the history of the Earle Theater. The finest attractions procurable from radio, stage, screen and musical comedy are being sought. Announcement of these bookings will be made in due time.

The Warner Brothers' presentations of screen and stage bills are not wholly confined to the Earle. A series of programs confined exclusively to motion picture subjects no less notable than the Earle's will, of course, be consistently purveyed in the Metropolitan, Tivoli, Ambassador, Avenue Grand, Apollo, Avalon and all the other residential theaters under Warner control in the Capital.

The overflow that attended the last performance at Loew's Fox Theater last night found themselves confronted with numerous surprises. In the first place, Arthur Godfrey, Washington's radio ace, acting as master of ceremonies as well as individual star of the "Going Native" all-Washington revue, has whipped the stage show into a brisker tempo than it enjoyed at the second show last Friday and now puts it over in almost ten minutes' less running time than was formerly required. That makes all the difference in the world.

Then, too, last night Arthur palpably had something up his sleeve besides his arm and a hanky. It was apparent from his grinning first entrance right up to the minute he exploded his piece de resistance of the evening, immediately following the microphone turn of the talented young woman and her two brothers known as the Radio Aces. At this juncture in the proceedings, Mr. Godfrey paid a high tribute to his famous columnist-sponsor and introduced Walter Winchell from his spotlighted seat in the second row, center, on the aisle. He must have been there all day to get that good a seat!

The author of "Broadway Through a Keyhole," the script that won him the priceless—from a publicity standpoint—sock in the jaw from Ol' Massa Jolson, needed practically no coaxing whatever to take the stage and deliver a brief but breezy monologue in which he paid tribute, in return, to his protege, to Ben Bernie, Al Jolson, Ruby Keeler and many others who figure prominently in his daily writings. The ovation accorded him as he left the rostrum, blowing kisses to the top galleries, almost blew the sides of the building out.

An Actor's Holiday!

Last night being a night off for the members of the cast of "The Drunkard, or the Fallen Saved," being presented atop the Willard Hotel, practically the entire personnel of The Roof Players hied themselves out to the Roadside Theater at Halpine, Md., to see the version of the same play that opened there Tuesday night, sans benefit, if any, of beer and pretzels.

Among those who attended last night's performance by the melodrama cast of the Roadside Players were Elizabeth Gatlin Pritchard, Anne Ives, Rebecca Tarwater, John Lloyd Sikken, M. Forney Reese, Maurice Jarvis, Howard Whitfield, Hugo Inden and Walter Studdiford.

To Run Third Week.

Tonight the Roof Players will resume their own edition of "The Drunkard" atop the Willard and will appear in it again Saturday night, with the added olio numbers presented by Becky Tarwater, Ethel Hayden, Isham Keith, jr., and others.

Tonight, too, for the first time, the role of Farmer Gates, originally played by John Shellie, will be assumed by another popular Washington actor, Howard Whitfield, owing to the absence of Mr. Shellie in New York for the next week or ten days.

Plans to continue the run of "The Drunkard" through a third week were perfected last night between Managing Director Harry P. Somerville of the Willard and the Roof Players. The customary schedule of performances on Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights probably will be adhered to, with free beer and pretzels and the gay goings on in the Tavern Club after the show.

Terry Turner, former exploitation export with Loew's, Inc., and Radio City in New York, is a Capital visitor in the interest of commercial tie-ups in connection with the Washington first-run exhibition of "The Six-Day Bike Rider," Joe E. Brown's latest vehicle, in which Maxine Doyle is his leading woman. Mr. Turner, one is led to believe, no longer is on the theater side of show business, but is in-our-midsting as a representative of Quaker Oats, operating through the advertising firm of Lord & Thomas, where he is an associate of Jack Pegler, brother of the writer, Westbrook, and a former local exploitation man for First National Pictures, back in the old silent days.

Cooperation Note.

The Roadside Theater, by the way, seems to have made a dicker with the B. & O. R. R., or whatever it is that runs along the window-sills of Washington's only "barn" playhouse. The trains now all go thundering by during intermissions.

---

The Roadside Theater, of course, is the old shoe heel factory, opposite the Congressional Airport. It was demonstrated Tuesday night that a few "heels" still get out there!

Here in Shadow Form on Friday

By Speed Kendall.

JEAN HARLOW.

She was obliging but the poor, flustered fellow couldn't find anything in his pockets to write on.

He finally put a $1 bill in front of her and asked her to sign it. "Too cheap," quoth Lupe, as she thrust the currency down the front of her dress.

A crowd commenced to gather around the table and the poor guy was thoroughly embarrassed so he laid down a $20 note. This joined the other bill and the autograph seeker not only lost his breath but also saw visions of losing his bills.

After Miss Velez had her little joke she affixed her signature to the bill. As the red-faced stranger and his fussed dancing partner disappeared in the crowd, Miss Velez said she wondered what he would have done had it been a $100 note.

Long-Distance Devotion.

The world's champion commuter was discovered yesterday. He is Bill Obryan, popular artists' agent, of London. His wife is Elizabeth Allen, M.-G.-M. player.

In the short space of less than a year Obryan has made eight round trips between London and Hollywood to visit Miss Allen. He's in town at the moment, but is going home in a couple of days.

Big Event Saturday.

Some new sables, more diamonds or a motor car are in store for Ruby Keeler. Her birthday is August 25, and her husband, Al Jolson, considers this is an extremely important occasion to celebrate. He arrives Monday from New York, getting here ahead of time to do some shopping.

Waning August Offers Varied Entertainment

Screen and Stage Programs Are Listed for New Week; at the Parks.

Jean Harlow, whose latest picture has been penciled in on local booking sheets time and again, only to be erased each time in favor of something else, will positively be the pictured star at Loew's Fox Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, in "The Girl From Missouri," originally known by the title of "One Hundred Per Cent Pure." In this subject the platinum blonde is supported by Franchot Tone, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis S. Stone and Patsy Kelley. The story concerns a former chorus girl who goes through many hectic adventures in becoming "a lady" and winning a millionaire. The stage portion of the new bill will be headlined by Myrt and Marge, famous radio team, in a skit in which they will be supported by Clarence, another favorite of the air waves. Daphne Pollard, English comedienne; Roy Smeck, "wizard of the strings," and the Lee Twins with Rio and Elliott also are on the bill. The Fox Movietone News and Prof. Phil Lampkin's overture will complete the program.

"Ladies Should Listen," which is a very excellent idea, is the title of the principal screen feature announced for the week beginning tomorrow at the Warner Brothers Earle Theater. The cast is lead by Cary Grant and Frances Drake, with Edward Everett Horton, Charles Ray and others of note in support. The story visualized in this picture is one of many ramifications, concerning a young Parisian man-about-the-better-places who finds himself with a nitrate concession on his hands and a beautiful young woman and her sweetheart who are trying to rob him. On the stage, Mitzi Mayfair, former partner of Hal LeRoy and one of the theater's most accomplished young dancers, will headline the bill in association with the Twelve Aristocrats. Other acts of interest will be supplied by Jack Powell, the black-face syncopationist, who drums on any and every thing; Arthur Boran, mimic, and George and Arthur Dormonde in "Scientific Nonsense." Universal News and orchestral numbers will round out.

Leslie Howard returns to the screen at RKO-Keith's Theater tomorrow as star of Columbia's production of "The Lady Is Willing," a sprightly comedy dealing with a charming love pirate, in which he is supported by Binnie Barnes, remembered on this side for her work with Charles Laughton in "The Private Life of Henry VIII," Cedric Hardwicke and numerous others of similar standing. "The Lady Is Willing" is said to afford its star one of the most satisfactory roles he has had before the cameras. The bill will be augmented by the usual varied assortment of short-reel subjects, including comedy, cartoon and the latest issue of the Pathe News.

* * * *

At the Warner Brothers' Metropolitan Theater for the week beginning tomorrow, the major screen attraction will be an hilarious comedy called "Friends of Mr. Sweeney," in which the foremost roles are assumed by Charles Ruggles and Ann Dvorak. Eugene Pallette, Dorothy Burgess and Dorothy Tree are among others who add to the fun of a story that centers in the adventures of a "timid soul" sort of person who blossoms out into a raging lion, inspired by love, liquor and an old-time college pal. The program will be completed by 15 minutes of world events; "Camera Speaks," a novelty, and Mitzi Mayfair and Donald Novis in "The Policy Girl," a musical comedy film.

* * * *

Performing in a manner of which he would never be suspected and doing the funniest things, Will Rogers returns to the F street screen tomorrow in "Handy Andy," which will be the principal feature of the new week's bill at Loew's Columbia, following its successful earlier engagement at the Palace. In this subject the star is supported by Peggy Wood, Mary Carlisle and Roger Imhof. News events, a comedy and other short subjects will complete the entertainment.

* * * *

All of the exciting adventures that Robert Louis Stevenson conjured to lend fascination to his tale of "Treasure Island" are preserved in the film version of the famous story which will enter its second week at Loew's Palace Theater tomorrow. The principal roles in this picture are played for all they are worth by Wallace Beery, Jackie Cooper, Lionel Barrymore, Lewis S. Stone, Otto Kruger, Charles ("Chic") Sale, Dorothy Peterson and scores more. A Walt Disney Mickey Mouse cartoon and the Metrotone News augment the feature.

With the summer rapidly waning, the al-fresco amusement places find themselves crowded with pleasure-seekers anxious to avail themselves of the last fleeting weeks of the season. Out at Glen Echo Park the Crystal Pool is attracting great crowds of "vacationers," the Spanish Garden Ballroom is packed nightly and all of the park's 50-odd devices are kept in operation at full tilt, as the saying goes. This week's extra added attraction is Wilbur May, an attache of Glen Echo for many seasons, who turns out to be an expert whistler and bird imitator. He appears twice nightly with MacWilliams' orchestra in the ballroom.

Movies and dancing are proving the late-season's prime favorites among the many amusements afforded at Seaside Park, down at Chesapeake Beach, Md. The motion-picture nights are Tuesday and Thursday of each week and on these evenings the ballroom will be found filled with screen "fans." Free dancing on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights continues to attract throngs of young people. Frank Flanigan's full orchestra plays for dancing on Saturday and Sunday nights. The latest lure to Seaside is a weekly swim ticket in the salt water pool at greatly reduced rate.

Mudge Believed Bound for N. Y., but Welcome Is Uncertain.

But Mudge is not likely to get a welcome reception home. There is a little question of 12 dead turkeys, which the police pup has yet to explain.

Anyway, Mudge was handicapped from the start. When he was born he had six toes on each hind foot. Everybody made a fuss over him and spoiled him. Then when he tried to sate his appetite on a dozen turkeys, he was sent away in disgrace.

Mudge then got tempermental and pulled a hunger strike. That didn't impress his guardians, so he began to snub everyone in the house. He wouldn't make friends with anyone. Then he took French leave and is believed en route to Suffern because it is the first time he has been away from his parents.

Safety Drive Shows Results

Marked Decrease Noted in Accidents for First Month.

Washington completed its first month of traffic safety yesterday with a marked decrease in deaths, injuries and accidents.

Women motorists hold honors as the safest drivers. Of 846 traffic infractions reported for the month, less than 10 per cent were due to feminine operators. The traffic observers' committee reports put reckless driving first, with speeding and passing stop signals second.

Only three traffic fatalities marred the month's record. This was compared with 9 for the same period last year. Accidents totaled 531, against 612 for 1933, and minor injuries dropped from 291 to 286.

More than 200 letters have been received by Sergt. Walter H. Thomas, assistant director of the campaign, commending the committee's efforts. Martin Lavelle, director of public safety in Cleveland, wrote for a report on the campaign's progress, declaring a similar drive is soon to be launched in the Ohio city.

The "voice of safety," officials declared, also has helped decrease traffic hazards.

Writ Holds Man In Alimony Case

Payments Are $1,248 in Arrears, Says Wife.

Charging that her husband is in arrears $1,248 in maintenance payments, Mrs. Marie Bonami, of 312 Seventeenth street southeast, yesterday secured from Justice Joseph W. Cox, in the District Supreme Court a writ of "ne exeat," which provided for the detention of George Bonami, her husband, 1114 Connecticut avenue northwest, until he posts a $2,000 bond.

Mrs. Bonami charged her husband already had left two jurisdictions where he had been ordered to support her and two children. Courts in Rhode Island and New York, she said, have issued orders requiring him to give her $20 a week, but he is now paying only $8.

HOLC Loan May Save Home

Sale Halted When Judge Learns Owners May Get U. S. Fund.

Sale of the property at 2222 M street northwest, scheduled for this afternoon, was halted yesterday by Justice Joseph W. Cox in the District Supreme Court when William H. Collins, attorney, informed him the owners probably could secure a Home Owners Loan Corporation loan.

Justice Cox signed an order preventing sale until Monday. Meanwhile, Mr. Collins said, he hopes to obtain ratification of the loan so that holders of approximately $3,600 in notes secured by the place can be paid off.

Bernard Chessin, 2222 M street northwest, and Morris Hormatz, 269 Carroll street northwest, petitioned for the restraining order. They said they had been told that the trust holders would require a $5,500 HOLC loan to cover the $3,600 indebtedness on the property. They are willing, they said, to make up the difference between the face value of the debt and the market value of the HOLC bonds which they asked the note holders to accept.

The defendants were Ralph D. Quinter, 815 Fifteenth street northwest; Albert Cerceo, 110 E street northwest; the National Savings & Trust Co., and Vernon G. Owens, trading as Thomas J. Owens & Sons, auctioneers.

Air Pioneer's Centenary Is Honored Here

Smithsonian Institution Observes Anniversary of Langley Birth.

The memory of Prof. Samuel Pierpont Langley, pioneer in aeronautics, who dreamed of the day when man might use the skyways, was honored by the Smithsonian Institution yesterday on the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Observing the Langley centenary, a special volume of selections from his writings in the fields of aeronautics and astronomy, astrophysics and physics has been prepared by Dr. Charles Abbot, secretary of the Institution, it was announced. An exhibition of Langley's inventions also is on display.

Langley, who hid in a tree and wrested the secret of flight from the birds, was third secretary of the Smithsonian. He was born in 1834 at Roxbury, Mass.

But for a heart-breaking mischance he might have won the honors now held by Wilbur and Orville Wright of making the first flight in a heavier-than-air machine.

He began a scientific study of the problem of flight at the Allegheny Observatory, near Pittsburgh. After coming to the Smithsonian in 1887, he continued his research, observing the birds from a platform in a tree in what is now Rock Creek Park.

"Mechanical flight now is possible with the engines we possess," Langley stated in 1891.

Five years later he successfully catapulted from a houseboat on the Potomac a 13-foot steam-powered airplane, which flew over half a mile and landed gently in the water. The War Department then granted him $50,000 to build a man-carrying machine. The machine was launched from a houseboat in the autumn of 1903.

It never got into the air, for its rear part caught on the launching gear. A second attempt failed for the same reason. His funds exhausted, Langley gave up his experiment. His machine now is housed in the Smithsonian.

Navy Cadets Of Argentine Due Monday

Capital's Younger Set Prepares Round of Entertainments.

Coincidence With Fetes for Poloists Augurs Gay Week.

Close on the heels of the arrival of the Meximan army polo team tomorrow will be the arrival of 50 handsome young Argentine naval cadets, who will dock in New York on Sunday aboard the training ship Presidente Sarmiento, and come to the Capital on Monday.

This midshipmen's cruise, which is under the command of Commander Manuel Alberto Moranchel, has been sailing leisurely up the coast for several weeks. The ship was due in New York the early part of August, but delayed at Colombia to attend the inauguration of President Alphonso Lopez, who visited Washington several months ago to discuss affairs of state with President Roosevelt. The visit was the occasion for members of Capital society to entertain in honor of the then President-elect and Senora de Lopez.

The arrival of foreign cadets or a polo team signalizes a round of parties for Washington's charming girls and a chance to display their knowledge of a language other than English, and many of the debutantes who do not speak Spanish will be taught stock phrases such as how-do-you-do and good-bye for the occasion.

Solace for Summer.

Members of the younger set who have remained in the Capital and have sympathized with themselves all during the summer are now delighted that they did not go away.

To the younger members of Washington society there is always a thrill in entertaining foreign midshipmen, although it is no novelty, as last spring the cadets of the Spanish training ship Juan Sebastian Elcano spent several days in the Capital and were the guests in whose honor the former Ambassador of Spain and Senora de Cardenas gave a dinner and dance at the embassy. Several weeks after the Spanish youths departed, the French training ship Jeanne d'Arc anchored off Annapolis, Md., and the officers and midshipmen came to Washington for a supper dance that the Ambassador of France and Mme. de Laboulaye gave at the embassy.

The Argentine officers and cadets will arrive in Washigton Monday afternoon at 1 o'clock and will immediately call on the Ambassador of Argentina, Senor Don Felipe Estil, who will arrive in Washington early that morning from Hot Springs, Va., where he and Senora de Espil have been spending the summer.

To Visit Annapolis.

At 2:30 they will call at the Navy Department and at 3 o'clock the Ambassador, Commander Moranchel and the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy, Commander Guillermo B. McKinlay, will pay their official call at the State Department, while the officers and cadets will visit the Pan-American Union. That evening a dinner dance will be given at the Army and Navy Country Club in honor of the visitors by the ranking officers of the United States Navy who are on duty in Washington.

Tuesday the visitors will go to Annapolis, where they will be the guests of the United States midshipmen at the Naval Academy until Wednesday morning, when after breakfast they will return to Washington and visit the Naval Air Station at Anacostia, and the Navy Yard. Later they will go to Mount Vernon and Arlington Cemetery, where they will pay tribute to the Unknown Soldier, and then to the statue of the Argentine liberator, Gen. San Marin, in Washington.

The Ambassador will entertain at a reception in their honor that afternoon, from 5 until 7 o'clock, at the Mayflower Hotel. The reception is scheduled at the hotel because the embassy is being redecorated. Following the reception, they will bid farewell to Washington and return to New York for a visit of several days.

Dinner at New York.

While in New York they will go up to the United States Military Academy at West Point, N. Y.; the Brooklyn Navy Yard and many other points of interest. On Friday, August 31, Rear Admiral Yates B. Sterling will entertain at a luncheon at the New York Yacht Club, in honor of Commander Moranchel, his officers and the Consul General of Argentina in New York, Senor Don Conrado Traverso, and the Naval Attache of the Argentine Embassy, Commander Guillermo B. McKinlay.

Senor Traverso is well known to Capital society, for he spent some time in Washington as secretary of the Argentine Embassy. Several years ago he married Miss Phoebe Quinby, of Washington, daughter of Mrs. Duncan Cameron.

This Powder Won't Provoke Fall Sneezes

Minus Orris Root, It Is Best for Hay Fever Sufferers.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

KER-CHOO! Hats off and handkechiefs out, for the sneezing season is here again. The air is permeated with pollen floating listlessly around waiting to prey on the eyes and noses of millions of hay-fever sufferers. Already 60,000 of these in Washington have succumbed to the attack.

Doctors say a majority of these people might escape the pollen attacks if they did not further aggravate their cases by the use of powders which disagree with them. Powders are usually made from orris root, and it seems that orris root is a primary cause of many cases of hay fever. The medical men will advise you to find a powder absolutely free of it, and stick to it.

But there's where the trouble begins. Where is such a powder? Last year it would have been hard to find, but this year there is one which has just appeared on the market.

It is put out by a cosmetician who promised her sister she'd find one that did not give her the sneezes and sniffles. It wasn't easy, but she persisted. The result is one of the finest grades of powder that has been offered the public.

It comes in four delicate shades, "Dawn Blush," "Star Dust," "Peach Bud" and "Sunset," adapted to any skin tone from pale to very dark. These powders have been sifted dozens of times through silk gauze so that when they are sold they are as fine in texture as a powder can be.

Tie This One.

Here's something to make your eyes pop and your hair stand on end! It's a lighter that will light in front of an electric fan, and not only light but stay that way.

When you first see it you think it's a lipstick, for it's the same size and in the same sort of case. But why would lipsticks be featured in a men's department, you wonder. And straightway you inquire. The clerk smiles mysteriously, lifts one up, and holds it directly in front of a fan going full blast. He unscrews the top, and presto, there you are, a windproof flame. It just pops right out of the top with no pushing of buttons or scraping flints. Try to blow it out. No use. It's there to stay until you screw on the top again and smother it.

$1 Fall Gloves.

Here they are at last, the ideal fall gloves. They aren't for those who want expensive gloves, but for those who want a high quality glove for one dollar.

These are new. They're made of a heavy silk crepe that gives a sleek and smart effect to the hands. There are others of a coarser weave which are preferred for sports wear. The soft, silkier ones are for street, and are to be recommended for wear with fur coats or coats with fur cuffs.

Both types are available in black, brown and tan.

Yarn for Knitters.

A greater number of women than ever before are joining the fall knitting brigade. This season, though, they are floating their banners with a new type of thread, called Silknit and put out by the Belding Hemingway-Corticelli Co., and on sale in a downtown store.

It's a nonmixture yarn, said to be the lightest, softest and strongest made. Besides being moth-proof, it washes easily, knits to actual size and positively will not shrink.

If you choose this yarn, and if your measurements are accurate, you can rest assured your suit will fit exactly. So many women, particularly young girls, take so long knitting a suit that by time they've finished it is stretched here, there, and yon. (No pun!)

Rayon Sale.

For today only, rayon underwear, gowns, and pajamas are selling for 79 cents a piece!

The pajamas are going to appeal particularly to those who are assembling college wardrobes, for they come in many bright colors as well as the light pastels. They may be worn for lounging and sleeping—a double usage the school girl likes.

Underwear and gowns are available in tailored styles, or trimmed in lace, just as you please. Take your choice of flesh, white, blue, and tea rose.

Mr. P. Sells Low.

A Frenchman whose name begins with "P" has scored each year for many years with a cleansing cream which is both a cold cream, and a vanishing cream. Because of its purity many woman who do not "go in" for cosmetics keep a jar of it on the bath room shelf to give their faces a quick and thorough cleansing. They've always paid $1.50 a jar for it, but now in the toilet goods department of a downtown store they may buy it for 29 cents! This drastic sale is simply to familiarize more people with this excellent product.

Sketched Outfit Combines Formality and Informality Successfully.

By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Women who "live" in suits—and many fashionable women do—are pretty fussy about the kind they choose. "It mustn't be entirely sporty," they say, "nor entirely formal." And they'll turn down both the very bright-color tweed and the black boucle or suede. They won't take raccoon trimming, nor yet Persian lamb. They'll refuse the very swagger loose coat and the very snugly fitted one, too.

It's the half-way-between type they want. And they're not having any trouble finding it. Because there are plenty of them, combining some sports features and some formal ones into a semiformal, all-occasion suit.

The one illustrated is a good example of the kind of lines to look for. They are comfortable, easy ones, but neither really loose nor really fitted.

Single-Breasted.

The single-breasted waistline closing is more formal than the high closing or open hang of the swagger coat. But it is not so formal as the double-breasted closing or the snug buttoning of a dressy suit coat.

A tweed is sure to be the material. It may be a Shetland variety, of soft and rather loose woven texture in a diagonal or chevron weave. It may be a Kemp tweed, harder finished, with little threads like rope fibre sticking up through it.

Or "Just Tweed."

Or it may be a hairy surface with some angora or rabbit wool woven in, very soft to the touch. Or the weave you think of as 'just tweed," with little bumps of mixed color in it.

Any of these put the informal look into the suit. But so as not to be too sporty, the color is usually kept in the quieter ranges . . . browns, dark wines, dark greens . . . instead of the brighter blues and rusts.

Then the fur. That should be semidressy. Lynx is a good compromise, or nutria if you prefer a shorter haired fur. And the fur is put on to look warm and cozy . . . more in the generous sports fashion than in the more delicate formal way.

Child Chats

By Alice Fox Pitts.

THE question of how long a baby's sun bath should be prolonged perplexes many a young mother. The Children's Bureau of the United States Department of Labor advises:

"A baby who has his first sun bath in warm weather may have all his clothes taken off except the diaper. If the weather is very warm, a two-minute sun bath is long enough at first. Lengthen the time each day by 3 to 5 minutes. In very warm weather a one-minute increase a day is enough.

"The sun bath may be lengthened gradually to three-quarters of an hour, and many babies, especially those over 4 months, may have an hour's sun once, or even twice, a day."

Of course, the baby's eyes should be shielded from the sun. Summer sun baths are best given between 8 and 11 a. m. and after 3 p. m., when the sun is not too hot, the bureau advises.

Hollander Puzzled Over U. S. Women

Dutch Working Girls Are Not Such "Ladies."

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Why American shop girls should save money to take a trip to Europe puzzles Sophie Voist, who is here from Holland to study them.

"It looks very strange," she said today, "to see working girls dressed like ladies, to go with them to restaurants and see them sit at tables and be waited on like ladies.

"It is not so in my country. Any one seeing us going to work knows that we are working girls.

"We carry our lunch and we take our coffee standing because it is cheaper that way. We do not have the same feeling of equality, of being as good as wealthy people, as working girls here seem to have. And I'm sure we don't have nearly so much fun."

Miss Voist, head designer of lingerie and children's clothes for the largest shop in Amsterdam, was the Dutch delegate to the Bryn Mawr College summer school for workers in industry.

Good Edibles Grow Profusely On Tropic South Sea Islands

In This Article, in a Series on National Foods, the Culinary Explorer Finds Polynesians Eat Their Fish While Still Wiggling.

By Susan Mills.

WHEN President Roosevelt sat down to a native feast in Hawaii, what did he eat?

The fare was probably something like this: Raw fish, octopus, roast pig, fruits and poi, that staple of the island people made from the breadfruit. It may be assumed the President ate the raw fish after it had been carefully killed; the natives eat it, wiggle and all.

The Hawaiian Islands and Tahiti are covered with natural and often wild edibles. Pigs are wild, limes, mangoes, guaves and other tropical fruits grow in abundance. The starchy breadfruit and the root-like taro are the equivalent of grain in other countries. The sea is full of brilliant tropical fish; coconuts supply food and drink and drinking vessels.

No table service is necessary in native fare. Coconut shells, often ornately carved, are cups; leaves are plates, and other utensils are sensibly substituted by the fingers.

Community Meals.

A native feast is a wonderful example of community spirit and informality. A hole is dug in the ground, the imu, hot stones or wood coals, are thrown in. Then into the hole fall the courses of the dinner, whole pigs, vegetables, taro and breadfruit, fish, and other materials prompted by the whimsicalities of the chef. The whole is covered with hot rocks, leaves and soil, and allowed to cook for several hours. When the dinner is done, the covering is raked off, and the family and friends sit around the trench-like hole and help themselves.

Fish is sometimes cooked in lime juice, or preserved in hollow bamboo trunks, with lime juice poured in. Breadfruit poi is made by baking the "fruit," then kneading the pulp with water until it is a soft mass. Poi is sometimes served with a sauce of grated coconut and its milk.

Avacados grow so prolifically in Tahiti that they are fed to the pigs. The little island of Bali produces 82 varieties of bananas. Some must be cooked, others may be eaten raw.

The sea around these islands yields all kinds of edibles, octopus, squid, seaweed, as well as fish.

Chickens are infrequent because they can't be kept alive. That little weasel-like animal, the mongoose, sees to that.

The coconut milk is a common beverage. For an intoxicant, the coconut flower is fermented, and the result is as alcoholic as could be wished.

These Polynesian people live close to the earth, depending upon it directly for their needs. They make their boats of the fibers of the breadfruit tree, its leaves make their clothing, tapa cloth; coconut makes the walls and roofs of their houses.

Here are two recipes using sweet potatoes and coconut, two staples of the islands.

Koele Palau.

Grate some coconuts and strain the juice. Have hot sweet potatoes mashed fine, pour in the juice gradually and stir until smooth. If not sweet enough, add sugar. This must not be kept over 12 hours as it will become sour.

Piepiele.

Grate some coconuts and strain the juice. Pare and grate some uncooked sweet potatoes, mix with the juice into a thick mass, put small portions in ti leaves (long thick leaves resembling a large iris leaf) and cook on live coals.

Escalloped Corn.

2 cups corn
2-3 cup cracker crumbs
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon paprika
¼ teaspoon sugar
3 tablespoons butter, melted
½ cup milk
1 tablespoon chopped parsley

What Today Means

"Virgo."

If August 23 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:45 to 11:45 a. m., from 3:45 to 5:45 p. m., and from 8:45 to 10:45 p. m. The danger periods are from 7:45 to 9:45 a. m., from 12:45 to 2:45 p. m. and from 6:45 to 8:45 p. m.

If your natal day is between August 23 and September 22, you were born in the zodiacal sign Virgo. An unassuming disposition, well balanced intellectually, energetic and a temper that is highly explosive on occasions are some of the principal characteristics of the people of Virgo. You have plenty of stamina. Your determination will never allow you to acknowledge defeat. Optimism will prevail under the most trying circumstances and keep you from ever becoming the victim of despondency.

If you expect results in business today, constant application will be necessary. Price will be an important factor in the securing of orders. There may be a much better market for medium than higher priced products. Publicity stunts and advertising if properly planned today may prove productive of good results. It might be a wise thing in the planning of social activities to avoid any requiring undue physical exertion, such as dancing, tennis, or games calling for quick movement. Married and engaged couples, as well as those busily engaged in courtship, will avoid misunderstandings if they will frankly confide in each other any financial problem that is confronting them. A sympathetic understanding and advice may result.

If a woman and August 23 is your birthday, there is every possibility that this may prove a red-letter day in your annals. Money may come into your possession at just the right time and when it is unexpected. Educational or literary work should prove congenial and profitable. Married life should provide harmonious surroundings and bring a great deal of joy into your existence.

The child born on August 23 should, when it passes the age of adolescence, give evidence of possessing a very strong character. It will in all likelihood be the type that can be depended on to do the proper thing at the right time.

If a man, and August 23 is your natal day, a retentive brain should prove to be a valuable asset. Art in some form, even if only taken up as a hobby, should enable you to find a satisfactory form of self-expression. Medicine, law, engineering, and writing frequently prove to be satisfactory mediums for success of Virgos. A wife should be able to provide for you the sort of home dear to every man's heart.

POTOMAC PARK

KENTUCKY and Zeke planned to be married when Congress adjourned, and nobody knew when that would be. Honeymoon in Bermuda, perhaps. Zeke wanted to be married in Kentucky's apartment, for sentimental reasons, he added, apologetically.

"I don't know about that," Kentucky replied with mock solemnity. "Doesn't it seem a bit queer to let sentiment enter into wedding preparations?"

"I've been a bit queer in the head for a long time," he retorted, "else we'd have had this wedding years ago?"

Wanda was in the bedroom and tried not to overhear, but she did.

"Whom shall we invite?" Kentucky asked.

"The witnesses required by law. No more."

"How about Wanda and Mr. Randall?"

"Fine! He's another sap like myself. She's a fine kid, and he ought to see it in time."

"Oh, I think he is aware of it, after a fashion. They're good friends—sort of platonic, I reckon. Lots of common interests. Awfully fond of one another, of course, but not in love, really, the way we are."

Wanda choked down a laugh over Kentucky's complaceny.

"I smell something scorching, Zeke. Excuse me a minute."

He went with her into the kitchen, and Wanda slipped through the doorway to meet David for their customary stroll in the park.

Blossoms Almost Out.

She did not tell him about the wedding plans because she had eavesdropped—without meaning to do it, however. Besides, they had plenty of other topics to discuss in the meantime. The long-expected spring, for instance.

"When do you think the cherry trees are going to bloom?"

They were walking along the rim of the Tidal Basin. A subtly pink aura hung over the leafless trees.

"They'll be out by Sunday," she noted with satisfaction. "It seems to me that I've spent the winter waiting for these cherry blossoms. I feel the trepidation of a wayfarer journeying homeward and wondering if things are going to be as beautiful as the memories of the old place he has carried with him through the years."

'She's gone, Wanda," he answered irrelevantly.

"Who? Gone where?"

"Carlotta—to Reno."

"Oh!"

Carlotta Came.

They walked on in silence. That woman was not real to her. He told her then what she had not known before: The first pay day after he learned of her deception he failed, for the first time in seven and a half years, to send her the regular allowance. She telegraphed. He did not reply. The 15th of March also was passed up. More telegrams, and a registered letter to be delivered only to the addressee. He ignored them all.

The 1st of April came, and then Carlotta. She was afraid he was ill, she said. He made his position clear. It was not neecsasry to mention Wanda. The only tie that bound them was severed, he told her, and he owed her nothing more. She declared then, just as expected, that she wanted her freedom. He was indifferent; told her to suit herself about that. She spoke of alimony; he was firm.

"You know that you can't get this divorce if I contest it, Carlotta. You have no grounds. Whether alimony is proper and equitable in the great majority of divorce cases is a debatable point in my mind; in this instance I am positive. I absolutely refuse to pay you alimony because in the future our lives will not be bridged by even the formalities of exchanged signatures on bank paper."

Financial Arrangements.

She wept and called him cruel and said that he had bitterly changed since the old days. She seemed surprised that he had changed, he told Wanda with a wry smile.

Moreover, he assured her, if she intended to get a divorce, she would have to get it over with at once. If he had to be harassed for months his peace of mind disturbed by things he wanted to forget, nothing was to be gained by it.

She got angry then and told him she was just as eager to get it over quickly as he was, and she would go to Reno tomorrow if she had the money. He asked her if she had thought of any way to raise the money. She could mortgage the office building if she had a clear title to it.

He knew then that she had seen a laywer about it after the boy had died and learned that the title reverted to him. She had a chance to sell it, if he thought that preferable. Of course real estate was not so high in price as it used to be, but then neither were rentals. He asked her how soon the sale could be effected. Immediately.

Her eagerness grew in proportion to his indifference. He gathered from certain infallible signs that she had a very special reason for wanting her freedom. She was interested in somebody else. If he had any feeling at all about it, he was glad. She did not realize that she had betrayed herself.

Finally he agreed to the sale of the office building, and she might have one-half the proceeds for the expenses of a Reno divorce and send the other half to him within the week. He would give her a clear deed to the house in which she had been living and all that it contained. (He did not expect to see it again anyhow.) Provided, that she was on her way to Reno to establish her residence within the next ten days to get the disagreeable business over with.

The agreement had been carried out, the building sold, the check sent him, he had sent her the deed to the house.

"And now she is on the train, my dear, and in a few weeks it will be over."

"Was she as beautiful as she used to be, David?"

"Why, I suppose so. Didn't notice. Older, of course. Her hair was quite gray—I did notice that."

Wanda could have wept for joy. She didn't have a gray hair among her black curls, and that one little item of superiority made her very happy. David was sweet. His story had been as unemotional as he could possibly make it. He did not hint at the strain he had been under, nor try to arouse pity for himself or condemnation of his wife. It seemed that he sensed Wanda's feeling of the unreality of this other woman and wanted it to be so in order that no shadow of jealousy might come between them.

Life Begins Anew.

"I will tell you when the decree comes, Wanda, and then I don't think it will be necessary for us to speak of it again. Nor the boy either, if you don't mind. I don't want you to feel that I'm shutting you out, and I don't want you to think that—that I can ever forget him. He meant everything to me in a way that is wholly separate from any feeling I have for you, but there is such a terrible finality about death and that chapter is closed. I want you to feel that our life is beginning anew with you as the most precious thing in it for me."

Could she ask for more?

"Do you—have you made any vacation plans?" he inquired.

"Not yet. It is early, you know."

"We'll spend it together. Like Canada?"

"How should I know? I've never been there. I've always longed to see Lake Louise."

"Very well, we'll go to Banff. Wish we could go to Switzerland."

Apartment Sought.

"Canada isn't our country."

"It's about the same thing. Funny! Never could think of Canadians as foreigners."

"We'll have to be looking around for an apartment."

"That's right. We'll have to find one close to the office, since we have no car. It would be an awful nuisance to have to depend on street cars and buses."

"I don't mind a little walk."

"I like to be near the office and walk for pleasure."

"You? You don't mean——"

"If you don't mind, David, I'd like to keep on working a little while longer."

"We can live on my salary, and some other girl needs yours."

"I know. And so do Jim and John and Ella and their families. They are having such hard times, David. Charity begins at home. I've had so little to send them! The CWA helped them out in a fashion, but now that it has dropped—well, the long and short of it is, families have to stick together. A sister with a conscience is still more reliable than a relief organization."

The cherry blossom festival was to open officially at sunrise, April 19. To attend or not to attend was the burning question at the Camotop forum.

"What's the hour?" asked Nick.

"Six o'clock."

"Count me out."

"Understood. Nobody expects to see your shining face before 8:50.

"Always up at 8:40. Have to be at the office by 9 o'clock."

"Wouldn't be if you didn't have to sign in," jeered Royce.

"Why?" asked Kentucky, surprised, "do you have to sign at your office?"

"Sure. Don't you?"

"Of course not. We have the honor system."

"Please pay."

Planning to Go.

"We do. I'll wager we have less tardiness than you."

"Of course. They have Nick."

"And they're darned lucky to get so good a man," Nick assured them. "Who is going forth to meet the dawn under the pink petals?"

"I am," declared Wanda, firmly.

"Oh, yeah?"

"Why not? Aren't you going, Kentucky?"

"I'll see. You, Royce?"

"Maybe. Mr. Randall?"

"Wouldn't miss it for a pig's ear. I'll meet you downstairs at a quarter to 6, Wanda."

Sufficient. She didn't care whether the others went or not.

She set the alarm for 5:30, but mistrusted it, and made a sentry of her subconsicous mind, by saying over and over before she went to sleep: "Five-thirty . . . David . . . Five-thirty."

She awoke and turned the silencer on the alarm before it went off, and dressed noiselessly. Kentucky slept.

How to Keep Well

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

IMPETIGO.

One of the most pernicous and puzzling infections of the skin, particularly when it affects new born infants, is known as impetigo. The disease is in a very high degree contagious and the organism—whatever it is—that causes the infection is exceedingly tenacious and resists careful methods of disinfection. So far the disease has defied bacteriologists. Efforts to identify a specific causative organism and to prepare a vaccine that will provide immunity have failed.

Epidemics of impetigo are more likely to occur during warm weather. Increased activity of the sweat glands no doubt provides a ready avenue of entrance for the infection. An epidemic of impetigo may appear in spite of every possible attention to cleanliness and of a highly organized, sterile technique.

Adults are in no sense immune. In fact, there are thousands of cases in every large community each year. The disease is usually recognized by the appearance of watery blisters, which later become filled with pus.

The treatment consists in the application to the infected era of bacteria killing solutions or ointments. This should be conducted under the supervision of a well trained and experienced physician. Anxiety on the part of parents is natural, but the disease usually yields to prompt treatment.

Prevention consists in avoiding contact with any one who has the disease or with any material that has been in contact with an infected person, such as clothing, toilet articles, towels, wash cloths, &c. It is one of our most stubborn skin infections. There is some reason to believe that visitors to patients in the maternity departments of hospitals have something to do with the spread of the infection. In many well regulated departments visiting on the part of members of the family is wisely limited.

The Over-Night Guest Is Out-Moded Person

By Malvina Lindsay.

A VESTIGE of early American civilization that could well be dispensed with is the overnight guest.

The big dinner with its half-dozen meats, vegetables and desserts is out; all-day visiting is antiquated; unexpected guests are declasse; lavish entertaining on the part of all but the very wealthy has been discontinued.

• • • •

Certainly the next step toward civilized living should be a social ban on the guest who intrudes himself into a home with bag and baggage when plenty of good hotels are at hand.

• • • •

Persons with numerous servants and professional givers of house parties need no relief from the overnight guest. But the average housewife with one maid—or none—certainly does. The simplest of daytime entertaining is a strain on her energy and her resources. But accommodating overnight visitors—finding places for them to sleep, often at the discomfort of the family, yawning until past midnight at their sagas, arising earlier than usual to superintend their breakfast, helping them get their clothes pressed, their telegrams sent, their other trivia attended to—all this is nothing short of frontier housewifery.

SUMMER, of course, is the open season for the overnight guest, who frequently also is the traveling motorist. By a carefully planned itinerary of stops at the homes of relatives and friends, he can see America first in two weeks at a minimum of expense.

• • • •

However, in justice to him, it must be said that often he is not actuated so much by financial motives as by sentiment, tradition, habit. When he fares forth to visit his brother-in-law, college chum, or old-home-town associate, he takes it as a matter of course that he shall sleep in his host's house. It never occurs to him that a happier visit for all concerned, guest as well as host, would be achieved by his making a hotel his headquarters and associating with those whom he is visiting at their convenience and his.

• • • •

Guests themselves would certainly be more comfortable with such an arrangement. For no one is more of a physical and mental prisoner than a conscientious guest. No one is a more unwilling bailiff than his host.

THE tradition of hospitality is one of the finest in Anglo-Saxon life. But like many other fine old ideals it needs modernizing. Frontier life has passed in this country. Rural life is passing. Persons are no longer dependent upon visitors from afar for news of the world, mental stimulation or social companionship. They no longer have spare bedrooms or leisure hours.

• • • •

They are crowded, they are rushed and they are tired. Quietude, the intimacy of the family circle and a chance to take down their back hair and pull off their daytime masks are boons they enjoy but seldom. The visitor who robs them of these is nothing less than a moral burglar.

• • • •

Pending action by etiquette dictators to sentence the overnight guest to hotels or lodging houses, there is not much the victimized host can do. But he might take a hint from the author of "Gulliver's Travels." Jonathan Swift in his later days solved the problem of hospitality by presenting each guest who arrived at his home with a shilling. "In order that you may suit yourself with your own entertainment," the crochety dean explained.

Even Queens Dislike to Eat Their Spinach

Victoria's Was Disguised by Eggs; the Recipe Is Below.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 22, (Spl.). Even Queen Victoria had to have her spinach disguised, according to Dr. Mary A. Wilson, 70-year-old cateress of this city who back in the 90's was dietitian at Buckingham Palace.

A young girl fresh from the medical college at New Orleans, Mrs. Wilson entered the queen's employ in 1893. She had been so successful curing elderly women at St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London that she was taken into the queen's employ.

Queen Victoria was then 70 years old, overweight and worried about her waistline. She was gouty and even had to have gussets put in the sides of her shoes. She would arise at 4:30 o'clock each morning and eat from five to six repasts a day.

The Spinach Recipe.

Deciding that the queen needed spinach, Mrs. Wilson faced the task of getting her to eat it. She tried a recipe she had learned from a relative of the Russian Czar. Queen Victoria, according to Mrs Wilson, was "crazy over it."

Here is the recipe: Cook the spinach with butter and next to no water to keep the flavor. Run it through a sieve and drain off all the liquid through a cheesecloth. Season and mold, then chill in the icebox. When the spinach is firm roll it around a hard-boiled egg like a croquette. Then dip in egg, milk and bread crumbs and fry quickly in deep fat.

Other devices were used by Mrs. Wilson to keep the queen's weight down and provide her with the proper diet. She would scoop about half the meat out of the pork chops and fill in the holes with herbs, chives and shredded lettuce, then cook slowly so the fillings absorbed the meat flavor.

Fooling a Queen.

Another device was starting the queen's dinner with what were called hors d'oeuvers but what was really a big dish of vegetable salad containing lots of shredded cabbage and grated onion. This was mixed with Russian dressing. That satisfied the queen's appetite to such an extent she could not eat the meat and other articles on the menu that she needed to avoid.

Under Mrs. Wilson's diet the queen reduced 5 inches about the waist and had the gussets taken out of her shoes.

After leaving the queen's employ Mrs. Wilson worked with Dr. S. Weir Mitchell and Dr. Harvey Wiley and was for ten years food editor for the Curtis publications. She baked the wedding cake for President Wilson's second wedding.

More High Schools Found In Cities Than in Country

High schools are more popular in urban areas, where 67 per cent of persons 14 to 17 years of age are enrolled, as against 31 per cent in rural schools. This fact was revealed in the National survey of secondary education just published by the Government Printing Office.

"There is still a considerable economic selection, a selection which keeps down the proportion of children from the lower economic levels completing the work of secondary schools," adds the report, which is published on an investigation conducted by authority of Congress, and directed by Government educational authorities.

Gold Eyelids, Green Faces Prophesied

Evening Complexions to Be Glittering, Cables Beauty Stylist.

Dramatic Gowns Require Brilliant Make-Up to Match.

By Frances Mangum.

"FACES will be tinted in soft shades of green. Eyelids will glitter with gold and silver points. A million pair of polished lips will brighten gay evening parties. For after-dark, beauty promises to set a new mark for brilliance and splendor this coming social season."

This is the fall beauty forecast sent via cable by an eminent beauty stylist who is now in Paris, where she planned the new make-up to complement the gorgeous new evening gown at the fashion openings.

Faces Must Scintillate.

She says complexions and make-up will have to be more scintillating and brilliant than ever before to set off the dramatic, glimmering gowns in resplendent weaves—metal woven into silk, cellophane gleaming from fabrics, silver and gold lame, swishing taffetas and stiff laces.

"Make-up may be casual, natural and dull in its texture during the day in keeping with the coarse-textured clothes shown for daytime wear. But at night the 'well-dressed face' will wear irridescent, gleaming eyeshadow, lustrous lipstick, and high-lighted rouge. Colors must be vivid, brilliant to achieve an effect as sensational as the elaborate new evening mode," cabled the beauty authority.

Gold-Flecked.

She says it is especially important this season for eyeshadow to be flecked with gold and silver points so that it will add a sparkle and glitter to the eyes as suitable contrast to the glimmering fabrics of gowns. Such eyeshadows come in fascinating tones of blue, blue-green and gray as well as in solid gold, bronze and silver, shining with myriads of tiny gold and silver lights.

Her report shows green-toned powder is already popular in Paris for evening wear. A mauve shade is running it a close second, but the green is still preferred.

Such daring make-up necessitates a fair complexion, free of blemishes, and the aftermath of sun tan. It's best to continue to use more subdued cosmetics until you have successfully coped with sallowness and even the slightest suggestion of acne conditions.

Give Women Their Way, Says Husband

Octogenarian Decides This Is One Rule for Marriage.

New York, Aug. 22 (Spl.).—Only one precept for a happy marriage has been evolved by Maurice Summerfield, who, with his wife, is repeating his wedding trip for the forty-ninth time. It is, "Let the women have their own way."

Then he adds, "They'll have it anyway and if you let them run things there won't be any trouble."

Mr. and Mrs. Summerfield are setting forth from New York to Norfolk to traverse the same ocean-way they traveled over on their honeymoon. Then they traveled from Norfolk to New York. This time they will reverse the travel. But it will still be an Atlantic sail.

Mr. Summerfield is 81 and his wife 75.

Feminine Magazines in the 70's Catered Strictly to Sentimentalists

"Down the tall steps she bounded, caring not for the falling snow." This line beneath the illustration for "The Footprint in the Snow" thrilled feminine readers of the 70's who warmed to the story of Horace Avergnon and his wife, who barely escaped the nefarious schemes of the dastardly Rodney Winchester.

New York Mirror in Its Later Days Is Good Example.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

ANYONE who thumbs the thin pages of Girls of Today will discover feminine readers of the 70's were interested in a number of things besides styles in dress, how to make a good layer cake, or how to play an enviable game of croquet.

The table of contents reveals the major feminine interest in that day was romance in all its ramifications. Girls of Today, with its love poetry, its sentimental serials, and its essays on courtship and marriage was consequently an ideal weekly periodical for the 70's.

But the publishers felt that popular as it was, it would be even more widely read if its scope of subject-matter could be expanded. Accordingly, its title became the New York Mirror, carrying in the first copy an explanation the change was "impelled by the fact that, contrary to our expectations, the first adopted title was, in a degree, narrowing the weekly down to a strictly class journal—which it is not intended to be."

Women for Wives.

New departmental features, appealing to both women and men, were immediately added to the already bulging list of contents. Essays by Garry Gaines, for instance, attracted much attention and favorable comment. One entitled "Men Want Women For Wives" was read, re-read, widely discussed and even elaborated from pulpits. The gist of the essay, explaining its universal appeal, is found in the first paragraph:

"Men who are worth having want women for wives, and they generally get them, for no sensible man will be attracted by a smirking, befrizzled, walking fashion-plate, any more than a woman of intelligence and real depth of character would think of allying herself with a perfumed milk-and-water fashionable fop."

Such sentiments were balm for wall-flower women of plain features, but worthy souls, who knew what it was to watch attractive men repeatedly seek "empty-headed coquettes" as partners for the cotillion or the schottish.

Readers seeking a lighter vein of reading fare found it in a regular column called "Ripples," devoted to such pungent paragraphs as the following:

"What do they always put D. C. after Washington for?" asked Mrs. Quilp of Mr. Q. 'Why, my dear, don't you know that Washington was the Daddy of his County?' said Quilp with a snicker."

Titles Get Hotter.

Much was made, too, of Washington society items and the latest gossip in Congressional circles.

Hints on "How to Attain and Retain Beauty" continued to be popular, but gained far less response than a weekly feature devoted to "How Men of Other Countries Make Love."

Serials gradually gave away to shorter narratives, profusely illustrated and complete on one page. Titles, more lurid than ever, dared to be single, but one line told more (if possible) than two lines—separated by a semicolon, "or," and the comma—used over previous stories. Such captions, for instance, as "Did She Sin?" "A Living Lie" and Mable's Wedded Lover" left little to be desired in the way of sensation and less to the imagination.

No single piece of fiction so fervently moved readers of the New York Mirror, judging from letters written to the publisher, as "The Footprint in the Snow," a story of one Horace Avergnon, who, goaded by the villainous Rodney Winchester, gives vent to his suspicions and traces his wife's footprints in the snow to the house where he supposes she is meeting her lover.

Here the narrative reaches a heart-rending climax when Horace discevers his wife's "lover" is his own son, who, "five years before, had been driven from home because he (Horace) was headstrong, obstinate and passionate."

The Villain Slinks Away.

The curtain for this touching scene rings down on a reunited family group with Horace clasping his wife and son "in an iron embrace" after Rodney Winchester, realizing his nefarious schemes had come to naught, had "slunk quietly away."

Perhaps the response from such stories as this gave the publishers the idea they could make more money by producing fiction exclusively. Perhaps the readers themselves demanded more and more written romances for their love-starved hearts. But no matter what the explanation, the New York Mirror went the way of other Beadle ventures. It made an unexpected exit from the periodical world in May of 1876.

Its publishers by that time were obviously not so much interested in catering to feminine foibles. They were concerned, rather, with putting out the 10-cent yellow-backs dealing with villains who chuckled fiendishly as they stroked their handle-bar mustaches, heroines who swooned on amazingly high precipices, and plots that would bring tears to the eyes of square-jawed, iron-muscled men.

Talented Landi An Excellent Horsewoman

Film Star Is Sports Fan as Well as Dancer and Author.

By Ware Torrey and Janet Owen.

IN these days of doubles and cynical audiences, we expect that the movie heroine will quietly step behind a tree when there's a difficult bit of riding to be done, or a cliff to fall over, and let her faithful shadow take the bumps. Elissa Landi can ride her own horses and take her own jumps.

She is one of Hollywood's finest horsewomen. She keeps a stable of saddle horses of her own, and not just for the name of having them. A course that includes many difficult jumps is laid out at her Beverly Hills estate.

She is a genuine sportswoman in private life. And she goes after a great deal of exercise, for the sport and action, and not just to keep her figure in trim.

In a crowded life, she is interested in much more than her newest picture. The last of four very readable novels, "The Ancestor," written in whatever time she could find, is just out. Before becoming an actress of note, she was thoroughly trained as a pianist, ballet dancer and mezzo-soprano, which gives her plenty of amusement for her odd moments.

Some of her general ability, and the fact that she does not fit into the usual Hollywood mold, can be traced to the fact that she is the daughter of Countess Zenardi-Landi and granddaughter of Empress Elizabeth of Austria.

High Topped Shoes Return This Autumn

MEMORIES of the days when shoes extended 16 inches up the leg are aroused by sight of the new fall footwear. Pumps and oxfords are showing a tendency to creep up over the instep and there is no telling where they will stop.

The low-cut pump that fell off the foot every time the toes wiggled is distinctively out of the picture now. So is the strapped pump. The winter pump fits snugly well up on the instep and often is a first cousin to the oxford.

Boots Cover Ankle Bones.

Shoes for street as shown in Paris often come midway over the upper curve of the foot, and sometimes cover it. Even boots that cover the ankle bones have been designed.

Many of the newest shoes fasten on the sides. They may lace or have a strap arrangement. The styles are reminiscent of French Revolution days, when every one desired a solid footing.

Wide wooden buckles, enameled to match the color of the shoes and studded with copper nail heads or colored stones, are an innovation in trimmings. Hooks often are used for laces instead of eyelets.

Some designers are predicting high shoes or boots will come into popularity by midwinter. Low shoes have had a run of nearly 15 years, they point out, and it is time styles were changed.

Heels Lower for Street.

Heels may be a shade lower this fall on street shoes, but they remain high on dress footwear. Kid is leading for utilitarian wear while suede and antelope are shown for afternoon. Calf is used for sports.

Black is the favorite color for general wear with reddish brown, navy blue and dark gray seconds. Dark green is expected to gain in color as the season advances.

Growing Up.

BOBBIE Taylor is growing up, being all of 18 and working. We'll have to stop calling him Bobbie and dignify him with his full name, Robert Love Taylor, which was handed down to him from his famous grandfather, the late Senator from Tennessee (Fiddlin' Bob of Happy Valley).

It's been a long time, too, since we have seen Bobby in the act of removing his coat, the better to paste somebody, usually a fellow three times his size. Bobbie frequently got the worst in these encounters, but though his head was bloody it remained unbowed.

• • • •

The Taylor men may not always be champions in fistic arguments, but what they could do in verbal set-tos is memorable in Tennessee. The "War of the Roses" will not be soon forgotten In that battle of words, Bobbie's grandfather was pitted against his brother for the governorship.

• • • •

They ran on Democratic and Republican tickets, respectively, and traveled around together, campaigning against each other. They stayed at the same hotels and sometimes in the same room. Bobbie tells the story that one night his great-uncle went out and carelessly left a written speech lying on the dresser. His grandfather swiped it and with great glee went out and made the speech himself.

Red-Headed Messboy.

Red-headed Bill Sparks, who has perhaps the most adventurous spirit in Cleveland Park, had his fill during a four-month cruise around the world aboard the S. S. President Johnson.

• • • •

When the ship docked in San Francisco he found himself in the midst of the longshoremen's strike. The entire crew left the ship, excepting Sparky and another boy, "Bing," so called because of his melodious voice. The crew threatened to return and remove the two from the ship.

Ingenious Mr. Sparks decided they should hide in the flour closet. They did and were forced to stay there 24 hours. The two heroes were rewarded with the best jobs, and Sparky was made messman to the captain.

• • • •

As a result of the strike the ship was left practically crewless. A number of boys from the University of California were procured and the voyage was continued. The captain, luckily a broad-minded man, had to stand for the collegiate cut-ups who were what one might term "learner" seamen. This was the ship's thirteenth voyage, which may or may not have been the cause of the many catastrophies that occurred.

Barmaids Lose To Competitors, British Barmen

London, Aug. 22 (U.P.). — Britain's barmaids are being ousted from the "pubs" of this country by the male bartender, according to the registrar general's latest figures.

Time was when the barmaid, usually of buxom proportions, ruled the roost in no uncertain manner in the bar rooms of public houses, hotels and theaters the length and breadth of Great Britain. Ten years ago the barmaids outnumbered the barmen by more than 6,000. Today they are in a majority of only 26 in the whole country.

Despite the apparent eclipse of the barmaids as indicated by these figures, there is yet little likelihood that they will suffer absolute extinction. There are still 27,693 barmaids in England and Wales and 27,667 barmen.

In London, however, the roster of barmaids has slumped by more than 1,000 in the last decade to a total of about 5,000.

Man Insists Place Is Not In the Home

Proposal to Relegate Him There Regarded With Consternation.

Questioned Male Admits Sex Incapable of Running Household.

WHEN woman first discarded her kitchen apron and announced her intention of invading man's world, his protesting roar was as angry as that of a jungle king whose authority has been challenged.

But that now historic roar was as mild and gentle as the voice of a baby lamb compared to that which now issues from the throats of harassed males. For, not content with being out of the kitchen herself, woman has decided "man's place is in the home," and she proposes to put him there for at least four hours a day.

And, according to Dr. Freda Winning, home economics expert at New York University, the plan must be carried out if people are to lead balanced lives. Homes, she insists, would be happier places if fathers donned aprons for half the day, and learned the technique of home management.

"What?" thundered a tall, exceedingly good-looking young man yesterday when it was suggested that he spend four hours daily in the kitchen. His eyes were so filled with consternation that one could see in them his mental picture of himself, enduring the jibes and laughter of his associates.

A Confession Slips Out.

"Horrible," he exclaimed. Then he brightened. "But also highly improbable. Now I ask you, wouldn't I make a sorry picture with an apron tied about the middle of my 6 feet 4 inches, cooking?

"Yes," he confessed, "I do think it more incongruous for a man to work in a kitchen than for a woman to run an office—women have proved themselves capable of running offices." He stopped short. The guileless creature had proved himself a traitor to his sex.

"What ho!" gloated his woman visitor, not sparing him in his embarrassment and treachery. "Then you think men can't run a house?"

"Not at all, not at all," he stammered. "I think they wouldn't." The idea, though, is pretty good, admits Roger Bounds, assistant in Civic Dvelopment Department in the United States Chamber of Commerce, for it was he who was so cornered.

"A woman's work is so easy I could finish my four hours' work in one and have three extra hours for golf."

A Horrible Idea.

"I can't see why this woman thinks it will make for marital happiness to have both husband and wife work in the kitchen and outside," he said thoughtfully. "The only two men I ever knew who were especially interested in cooking were later divorced. Besides, who can advance an idea and say that is the way to happiness for all men? My idea of happiness might be sailing a boat, and that might not appeal to other people at all. A man should be allowed to choose his own pleasures.

Mrs. L. B. Castell, president of the District Chapter of Parents and Teachers, doesn't think men should have to cook, either.

"As for its causing fathers to see more of their children, how many children spend much time in the kitchen nowadays? Besides, there are other much more congenial activities that bring fathers and children together."

Where there are no servants and the wife works outside, he should wash dishes if she does the cooking.

Why Suffer Fat? End it with Marmola

You're always saying to yourself, "Oh, I wish I could get rid of that awful fat." But why don't you do something about it?

Maybe someone has made you think the only way to reduce is to starve yourself..or bend and kick a hundred times a day..or drain your system with drastic purgatives.

That's utter nonsense! Many years ago medical science discovered that obesity, when an abnormal condition, is caused by the lack of an important element which the body normally supplies.

One such element—which is the chief active ingredient of Marmola—has since been prescribed to thousands of overweight women. Day by day they have felt lighter, more alert, more energetic. Soon they find their weight satisfactory. The excess fat has simply slipped away, revealing the trim and slender figure underneath.

Sounds like a miracle, but thousands of women who have taken Marmola as directed—4 tablets a day—might well tell you it's a demonstrated fact. Indeed, since 1907 more than 20 million packages of Marmola have been purchased. Nothing succeeds like success. Marmola is put up by one of the leading medical laboratories of America.

Start today! You will soon experience Marmola's benefits. When you have gone far enough, stop taking Marmola. And you will bless the day when you first discovered this marvelous reducing agent.

Seven Women Dismissed in IndianBeatings

(Associated Press.)

A determination to stop brutal and humiliating treatment of children in Indian schools was expressed last night by John W. Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs. He made his statement after Secretary Ickes had suspended seven white women teachers in the Southwest. Mr. Collier warned that summary action would be taken against any others found guilty of inflicting corporal punishment and using "dark age" methods.

The seven teachers were accused of beating pupils, making them kneel for hours on concrete floors and requiring them to stand motionless staring at a blank wall. Mr. Collier said the punishment had been administrated for such minor infractions as making too much noise, "hooting" in class or performing other schoolboy stunts that proved "irritating."

Charges have been filed against five of the offenders and they, with the two others also suspended, must offer mitigating circumstances at a hearing to prevent dismissal.

"The school forces of the Indian service," said Mr. Ickes, "must understand that corporal punishment and stupid, humiliating punishments of boys and girls will not be tolerated. It is evident that superintendents and principals have not in all cases impressed this fact on their subordinates," he said.

Although a number of other instances of brutality are under investigation, Mr. Collier said the practice was confined to a small minority of the Indian schools which are located in 22 States and are attended by 30,000 pupils.

In one of the cases under investigation, the commissioner said, a teacher was suspected of beating a child for speaking his native tongue on the school playground. Years ago, Mr. Collier added, severe bodily punishment for speaking the Indian language was common and offenders were thrown into "jails" and "dungeons."

Moore House Is Protected

Fire Hazard Reduced by Hook-up Increasing Water Supply.

Through PWA funds and CCC labor, the famous old Moore House at Colonial National Monument, in which articles of surrender ending the Revolutionary War were drawn up is no longer a fire hazard.

With the cooperation of the Navy Department, the shrine's water distribution system has been hooked up with the huge storage tank of the Navy's fuel oil station, located 600 feet from Moore House. Formerly the house was protected only by an underground storage tank with a capacity of 7,000 gallons.

Two fire hoses, throwing 250 gallons a minute, would have exhausted the supply in 14 minutes. The naval tank has a capacity of 100,000 gallons.

An automatic alarm valve has been installed and any flow of water through the line connecting the two water systems causes a contact to be closed in the valve mechanism. This, in turn, starts a flow of current which rings the gong, whereupon the Navy station starts its pumps in order to replenish the water supply.

Culbertson on Bridge

Counting on the Defense.

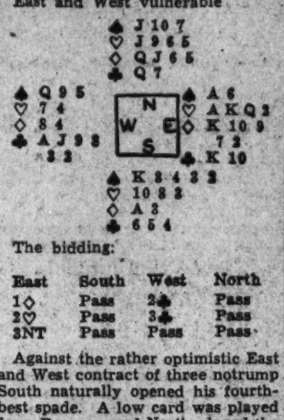
Many Bridge players see almost everything except what is as plain as the nose on Jimmy Durante's face The reason is apparently a general feeling that certain phases of the game are too mysterious to be tackled by anyone except the experts. One such phase is card-reading. For some reason which I do not fully understand this form of cerebration is regarded by many as on a par with witchcraft and astrology. Actually it is often as simple as seeing Mr. Durante's aforementioned appendage.

Take for example South's count of East's cards in the deal below, through which he was able to defeat East's contract.

East, Dealer
East and West vulnerable



The bidding:

| East | South | West | North |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1◇ | Pass | 2♣ | Pass |
| 2♡ | Pass | 3♣ | Pass |
| 3NT | Pass | Pass | Pass |

Against the rather optimistic East and West contract of three notrump South naturally opened his fourth-best spade. A low card was played from Dummy, and North played the Ten, the Declarer winning the trick with the Ace. East now played the King of clubs and then the Ten, and before deciding whether to finesse or play the Ace, he went into a deep study. South took this opportunity to analyze the hand as well as he could. Of course he realized that if West played the Ace of clubs his partner's Queen would drop and the contract in that case probably could not be defeated. Accordingly, he based his hope of defeating the contract on the assumption that East would go wrong on his decision in the club suit. South knew that the spade Queen was the Dummy's only possible card of re-entry. He first decided, therefore, that as soon as a low spade was led from the East hand, he would duck, hoping that his partner held the Jack, and the Declarer would guess wrong as to which card to play from Dummy.

Fortunately for South, he did not have to carry out his decision immediately. The Declarer finally lost the club finesse to North, and the latter returned a heart. At this moment South suddenly realized from the bidding that the East player probably had five diamonds and four hearts, and, since he had already played two clubs, could hold a maximum of two cards in the spade suit. As a result, South realized that by going up with the King of spades he would effectually shut out the Dummy and probably thereby defeat the contract, without depending upon the hope that East, the Declarer, would make a bad spade guess. In short, South knew that by going up with the spade King he had a sure thing, instead of an even or slightly less than even chance that East would make a wrong guess.

East, of course, won North's heart return in his own hand and now led a spade. Had South played low, East would have put up the Queen as his only hope. But when South played the King the Declarer now had to play the rest of the hand single-handed without using the Dummy at all, and as a result was set one trick.

South deserves credit not for making a brilliant play but for failing to make a bad one, and his course was made clear to him by the simple process of counting.

M. A. Parris Suffers $8,000 Loss Near Warrenton.

Warrenton, Va., Aug. 22 (Spl.).—Fire of undetermined origin, which broke out near Marshall, Va., 10 miles west of here, in the newly constructed summer home of Morris A. Parris, 3022 P street northwest, Washington, caused damage estimated at $8,000 last night.

The house, of brick construction, had 20 rooms and was built by C. T. Grant, Warrenton contractor. Painters were finishing the interior and it would have been ready for occupancy next week.

Neighbors saw the flames and sent an alarm to the Warrenton Fire Department, which fought the fire from midnight until 6 a. m., hampered by an inadequate water supply. The fire truck, which carries a 500-gallon water tank, had to make two trips. The roof and second story of the central structure were destroyed.

Nats Turn Back Tigers, 7 to 5, Behind Steady Pitching of Whitehill

This Morning

With Shirley L. Povich.

TOMMY ARMOUR calls Walter Hagen the "Great Emancipator" . . . because Hagen was the first professional athlete to shoulder his way into the social respect of the upper strata . . . and paved the way for the admission of golf pros to social equality with amateurs . . . golf didn't let down the barriers until after Hagen had played with the Prince of Wales and was addressed as "Mr.," a salutation until then reserved strictly for amateurs.

A purchaser is being sought for the Laurel race track . . . as a result of the decision of the heirs of the late James Butler to dispose of his racing interests . . . the best of the Butler horses are listed for sale at the Saratoga auction and the Whitneys are evincing an interest in the prospective disposal of the track at Laurel . . . failure of the District racing bill to pass Congress has caused the Whitneys to turn their eyes toward the nearby Maryland track.

If the Tigers cut the world-series melon, four former Nats will share in the spoils . . . Fred Marberry, Al Crowder, Carl Fischer and Goose Goslin . . . it would be Goslin's fourth world series, the third for Marberry and the second for Crowder.

Jack Dempsey politely stepped out of the role of referee in the main bout of the Labor Day card at Griffith Stadium in which his man, Tony Galento, is to fight Marty Gallagher . . . despite the fact that Gallagher was willing to fight with Galento's manager as the third man in the ring . . . remembering that when Max Baer fought Paulino at Reno, Dempsey gave the decision to Paulino . . . despite the fact he was then holding a 25 per cent interest in Baer's earnings.

The District of Columbia Boxing Commission is getting out of the red . . . as the result of the Tow-Galento, the Furr-Bowen, the Chocolate-Sarilla and the Wilson-Loaza bouts . . . Bob Tow will meet Natie Brown at the ball park within a month . . . on Labor Day, Tow is fighting Dewey Kimrey at Richmond . . . Kimrey's last effort was a draw with Natie Brown, who beat Tow at Portner's . . . Fats Cornell is still paying $1,000 per year land rent for his Laurel arena that will not be opened again.

The State of Colorado is being flooded by Jack Espey, G. W. U. Minister of Englightenment, with propaganda anent the Colonial team that will play Denver University in September . . . Georgetown is the only major Washington college without a professional sports press agent . . . Catholic University, as usual, has booked the suicide game with Holy Cross at Worcester, which for the past half dozen years has blighted the C. U. season virtually before it got under way.

Golf is still among the snootier sports . . . public links players are not admitted to the lists in the national amateur tournament . . . or even to the trials . . . they are very effectively barred by the U. S. G. A. ruling that no player of more than a four handicap can compete . . . and, of course, they don't issue handicaps to public links players . . . since Bobby Jones turned business-man golfer the national amateur gates have steadily declined.

Wrestling Promoter Joe Turner was struck by an idea when they imported Jack Dempsey to referee at the Riding and Hunt Club and turned 'em away at the gate . . . $9 Jess Willard will referee Turner's bouts tonight . . . but Willard is no Dempsey as a drawing card . . . big Jess was a popular figure with the fans only when he met Louie Firpo . . . and went down to an inglorious end to his fighting career.

Wes Ferrell's 2 Homers Win For Red Sox

Hurls Well, Wins His 12th Game in 10th, 3 to 2; Chisox Victims.

BOSTON, Aug. 22 (AP).—Wesley Ferrell, Red Sox twirler, chalked up his twelfth victory of the season today as he led his team to a 3-2, 10-inning win over the Chicago White Sox, with two homers.

In the extra inning, with two men already out, he connected with the first ball pitched to send it high over the center-field fence and win his own ball game.

Yanks, Indians Split Twin Bill

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Mel Harder, the slender hurler whose relief pitching carried the American League to victory over the National League in the all-star game, spoiled a golden opportunity for the New York Yankees to close up the gap between the Yanks and the pennant-poised Detroit Tigers today.

After Vernon (Goffy) Gomez had shut out the Cleveland Indians with two hits to win the opening game of a double-header, 9 to 0, the Yankees bumped into young Harder and, while he was tapped for 10 hits, he left 11 New Yorkers stranded on the bases and led the Tribe to a 10-to-4 triumph in the nightcap.

Deprived of a clean sweep of the two-game program, the Yankees nevertheless picked up half a game on the Tigers, who were tamed by the Washington Nationals.

Gomez, in rare high form, was the whole show in the first game, blanking the Tribesmen with two hits for his second successive shutout, his eighth consecutive victory and his twenty-first triumph of the campaign. Gomez's victory today tied him with Dizzy Dean, of the St. Louis Cardinals, for the most wins in both major leagues.

Sailing Trial Annexed by Rainbow

Vanderbilt's Handling Is Factor in 30-Mile Race Off R. I.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 22 (U.P.).—Harold S. Vanderbilt, who defended the America's Cup in 1930 with Enterprise, started his new yacht Rainbow along the same trail today by sailing her to a decisive victory over Weetamoe, in the first race of a series to determine the defender against Tom Sopwith's challenger, Endeavour.

The Rainbow appeared definitely the better boat. She held the advantage over the entire 30 miles of the windward-leeward course, starting 12 miles at sea, to win by 2 minutes 34 seconds.

She established a lead of 3 minutes 49 seconds over the first 15-mile leg, to weather, while judgment went galley west and the crew seemed to lose organization aboard Weetamoe. The latter, owned by Frederick H. Prince, and sailed by Richard de B. Boardman, picked up 1 minute 15 seconds on the 15-mile run home, her only worthy effort of the race.

Rainbow will meet Yankee, the Boston boat which has overwhelmed her in the early going, in the second trial tomorrow, according to W. A. W. Stewart, chairman of the America's Cup committee.

The race committee, aboard the old rumrunner, Wilhelmina, plotted the starting line at the special America's Cup buoy, 9 miles southeast of Brenton Reef Lightship, and sent the tug Thomas Moran 5 miles to the southwest to mark the weather buoy. The wind was southwest by south, 12 knots velocity.

Vanderbilt outgeneraled Boardman at the start, at 11:40 a. m., and crossed the line with Rainbow parked on Weetamoe's weather quarter. As the Rainbow was on starboard tack, with right of way, Boardman could not tack, and had to go just where Vanderbilt wanted him to go.

Browns Shut Out, 2-0, By Dietrich, of Macks

Philadelphia, Aug. 22 (AP).—Bill Dietrich was credited with his second shut-out victory of the season today as he hurled the Athletics to a 2-to-0 win in opening a five-game series with the St. Louis Browns.

Bruce Campbell, St. Louis outfielder, had a perfect day with the willow, hitting four bingles in four times at bat.

Bob Johnson was the bat star for the Athletics, getting a single and a triple to pound in both Athletic runs, Doc Cramer scoring in the first and sixth innings.

Extra Heat Needed For Regatta Events

Martinsburg Entries for Sunday Event Swelling.

Martinsburg, W. Va., Aug. 22 (Spl.).—With 43 entries already listed, officials of Potomac Boat and Motor Club, sponsors of the second annual regatta on the Potomac, near Bedington Sunday, announced today that it may become necessary to run each race in three heats instead of two, as scheduled.

The class A event has 12 entries, including three girls and a 14-year-old boy. The class B event has 21 entries, including the 1933 high-point scorer and the high-point scorer to date for 1934. Twenty-six are entered in the class C, including the best talent in outboard motor racing, among them Joel Thorne, New Rochelle, N. Y., the most consistent first-place winner in class C (professional) events this year, and C. Mulford Scull (amateur), the greatest winner of all time. Alec Cunningham, of the local club, also will be entered.

The free-for-all event has attracted ten drivers, although it is believed that the majority of drivers will enter by Sunday.

Linke's Malady Still Puzzles Doctors

By Frank H. Young.

PITCHER ED LINKE, the Nats' No. 1 invalid, is proving a mystery to the medical profession and winning more notoriety as a patient than he has as a pitcher.

Linke's useless salary wing was examined and treated at Georgetown University Hospital Sunday, at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore Monday and Tuesday, and at George Washington yesterday. The net result has been the discovery that little or no blood is flowing in his right arm and that he can not use it—and Linke already knew this when he first reported the malady to Trainer Mike Martin last Saturday.

Linke's case, according to the many physicians who have examined his wing, is unique. At times the indicators show almost normal circulation and blood pressure, while on other occasions the arm is cold and utterly useless. X-ray photographs did show a slight growth on the big bone of Linke's right shoulder, but this is in no way linked with his present ailment.

The University of Maryland boasts a pipe-like machine supposed to aid in the stimulation of blood-circulation in the arm, while Linke's own investigation has elicited the information that Pitcher Dick Coffman, of the St. Louis Browns, once suffered from the same ailment and was cured with diathermic treatments. It had not been decided last night whether one of these methods would be tried or whether the physicians have some other experiment to make. While awaiting a decision, Linke has been told to give his arm a complete rest.

The other Nat invalids, Joe Kuhel and Cecil Travis, are showing signs of making some progress.

The first-sacker was in uniform yesterday for the first time since he broke his ankle many moons ago. He did no running, simply practicing throwing and catching the ball. Travis sat in the stands and nursed his Charley horse, but hopes to take a mild workout today. He probably will be missing from the entire Detroit series, and maybe longer.

Mickey Cochrane and his league-leading Detroit Tigers will be with us again this afternoon. Bobby Burke, who held the Indians to three hits his last start, will try his southpaw slants against the Bengals. Tommy Bridges is expected to oppose him on the hill. Although Bridges is supposed to be somewhat of an enigma to the Washington batters, he has beaten them only once this season and has bowed to them three times.

"General" Al Crowder, one of the many former Nats now sporting a Tiger uniform, will not toil in this series, Pilot Cochrane stated. He needs more bull-pen work, Mickey opines, before he will be ready to start again.

Judge Emil Fuchs, president of the Boston Braves, was a visitor yesterday. He is here on business with "Uncle Sam" and in no way connected with the national game, he declared.

Al Lang, voted "King of Florida" by the scribes, had a talk with President Clark Griffith yesterday on the subject of the Nats switching their spring training camp to the Alligator State. While satisfied with Biloxi as a conditioning base, the Nat owner told Lang he would consider any good proposition, especially if St. Petersburg was involved.

The secret of the Tigers' success this season was evident just as soon as they took a preinning practice. A black-painted ball has brought them their good luck. They stole the idea from the Boston Red Sox, who use an iodined ball for their drills between innings.

Battle Royal Is Likely at Mat Bouts

Willard, Ex-Ring Champ to Referee Garibaldi, Szabo Feature.

Will Take Hand Himself if Boys Get Too Rough, He Declares.

WITH a former world champion fighter calling the shots and with two rivals who are as congenial when in each other's company as a couple of bulldogs matched in the feature fracas, tonight's wrestlefest at Griffith Stadium promises to furnish better-than-average entertainment. Jess Willard is the gentleman who will do the refereeing and Sandor Szabo, the Hungarian champion, and Gino Garibaldi, the rough New York Italian, are the principals who will attempt to murder each other in the fair name of wrestling.

Among Jack Dempsey's knockout victims is a wrestler who failed to quit when the Manassa Mauler said quit in a bout that he refereed, while Gunboat Smith gave the fans much pleasure while officiating here several months ago by slugging and kicking participants who slugged and kicked their foes. Willard handles bouts in the same manner and, although he has lost his championship punch, it is still potent enough to jar the back teeth of recipients.

Battle Royal Looked For.

But Szabo and Garibaldi dislike each other so personally, long since having scratched each other's names off their visiting lists, that they likely will forget that they are wrestling when they oppose each other in the ring. And, with this pair slugging, and Willard slugging to two of them, all the elements of a battle royal are promised.

One thing is certain—there will be no disqualification. "I can handle the rough boys," Willard told Promoter Turner over long-distance telephone last night. "I've handled tough matches before and haven't had to stop one yet. The boys can be as rough as they want to so long as they live up to the rules, but if they start eye-gouging or kneeing, I'll take a personal hand in the roughing."

The winner has been promised a crack at Everett Marshall, and a chance at either Jim Londos or Ed (Don) George if he clears this hurdle, so both may be counted upon to do their durndest tonight.

Dick Shikat, former title-claimant, and Harry Fields promise a sizzling semifinal, with the preliminaries bringing together Henry Piers and Joe Devito, Jim Heslin and Bert Rubi and "Father" Lumpkin and Vanka Zelesniak. The first leer is scheduled for 8:30 o'clock.

Middletown 3-1 Victor Over Jefferson Nine

Middletown, Aug. 22 (Spl.).—Middletown set back Jefferson in a good game in the Tri-County League, 3 to 1. Jefferson took the lead in the third inning, but an error, stolen base and two hits gave Middletown two runs in the sixth, which clinched the game. The Valleyites put over one more in the eighth frame.

Both pitchers were effective in pinches and Middletown was given good support in the field, Hauver made the best outfield play, a long catch in left field that looked good for a triple.

15,000 at Cumberland Races; Wandering Jim Pays $34.70

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 22.—The second day's racing of the Cumberland Fair, before the largest Wednesday crowd of its 17 years, was marked by thrills. The management placed the crowd at 15,000, which taxed the capacity of the betting booths, recently doubled. The betting total was far in excess of the second day of last year.

Wandering Jim, owned by C. L. Born, Hagerstown, in the third race paid the biggest amount of the day, $34.70, and so far of the meet. The record of the track for five-eighths mile was broken twice, first in the fourth race by Easter Herald, owned by Mrs. C. M. Feltner, Berryville, Va., in .56, clipping it one-fifth, and then in the sixth by Lady Buck, owned by B. Glasscock, in .55 2-5. This, the fastest time of the meeting, was made in the Potomac race.

Schley B., owned by J. P. Bowman, Culpeper, Va., took the fifth race by a Garrison finish, nosing out Dunora, which set the pace until the last 70 yards.

Racing was held up 15 minutes by a runaway, Noajoyce, owned by R. Taylor. This horse, with quite a record, and on which there were placed many bets, ran eight circles around the track and reversed himself twice after he reared up and threw his rider, J. J. McTeague. Noajoyce finally got in the race, but not in the money. McTeague was uninjured.

Mortimer M. Mahoney, manager of the pari-mutuel department, is at Narragansett Park, R. I., and was represented by Dave Heisman. Long Taw Welter is doing the starting. Al G. Weston represents the Maryland Racing Commission in the stewards' stand.

This is the first time Mahoney has been absent since the introduction of racing here.

Thursday has always been the big day of the fair and indications point to a record crowd. Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore is due and State candidates, both Democratic and Republican, have accepted invitations to be guests of the fair management.

Cronin Hits Home Run In Third

Bolton Makes 3 Hits; 3 Detroit Pinch-Hitters Fail.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

EARL WHITEHILL, the chunky, temperamental Washington southpaw, took all the criticism that has been heaped upon his jet black head this season, wrapped it into eight puny hits and stuffed it down the collective throat of the mildly protesting Tigers yesterday as the Nats took the opening game of their series, 7-5.

The Earl was superb. Not only did he handcuff Mickey Cochrane's mighty men of destiny with his best mound performance of the season, but applied his bat with diligence and vigor to the pitching of Vic Sorrell and got two singles, driving in three invaluable runs. After the second inning, when Detroit sank its fangs into four juicy hits and scored as many runs, Whitehill was in complete control.

Master in Pinches.

He pitched no-hit, no-run ball for five consecutive innings, weakening in the eighth, when the Tigers got two hits, and in the ninth when two more brought their fifth and final run. He was at his best in the pinches. Two Tiger pinch-hitters, one, Rudy York, home-run king of the Texas League, making his debut in a big league uniform in the ninth, struck out, and a third rolled to Cronin.

Whitehill was given air-tight support by his mates afield, and was helped along to his twelfth victory by the 11 hits, one being Frisco Joe Cronin's home run. In a word, the team that won the pennant last year showed the team that is going to win the pennant this year just how the old army game works.

The Tigers unleashed a sustained attack in the second and helped themselves to a chunk of four runs and a comfortable lead on Washington as Rogell opened with a scratch single toward third. Hank Greenberg walked and Owen singled to center, scoring Rogell, sending Greenberg to third.

Hayworth nudged a single to center, scoring Greenberg, putting Owen on second. Whitehill threw out Sorrell on a sacrifice hit, and as Fox fanned the rally appeared to subside. But White poked another single to center, scoring Owen and Hayworth with the fourth run of the inning.

Whitehill Singles.

The Nats came back punching in their half of the same inning and retrieved three runs as Whitehill rapped a single to center with the bases loaded, scoring Schulte and Susko, and placing Bluege on third. Ossie jogged home on Myer's fly to center.

Carry Over's Bid Fails By Neck

Jockey Jacobs Brings His Mount From Far Back to Win Feature.

PAWTUCKET, R. I., Aug. 22 (AP).—Khorasan, veteran of five years of racing and winner of his previous start, today won the Lafayette Claiming Stakes in a driving finish at Narragansett, equaling the track record of 1:51 for 1⅛ miles.

The 6-year-old son of Omar Khayyam, carrying the silks of Mrs. J. Badame, came from far back to take command at the head of the stretch and then finish the long journey a neck in front of the Wheatley Stable's consistent 3-year-old, Carry Over. Cleves, a stablemate of Carry Over, running for H. C. Phipps, lost the place by a half length.

Khorasan, a lukewarm favorite at $8.40 for $2, was seventh away from the barrier and was still in that position at the half-mile post. Joe Jacobs brought the chestnut horse up fast, however, and when Carry Over, out in front, reached the three-quarter mark, the Badame standard bearer was running in third position, only 2 lengths back of the pacemaker. In the drive for the judges' stand, he had enough left to catch and pass Carry Over.

J. D. Mikel's Gaillardia, after setting the pace for the first half-mile, quit and wound up tenth in the field of 11.

Dear Al: Narragansett, Aug. 22.

The Bennings' choices gave up today. After running second for three straight races, they just threw up the sponge and refused to exert themselves for the remainder of the card. It was not a bad day for Clocker Mike, who is down at Cumberland. He added a pair of winners and Wandering Jim, his second pick, was the best mutuel of the day. Then again, I believe I told you that Mike left me a fine workout and recommendations on Fred Almy which won at a $19 pay-off. My biggest disappointment was the fact that Boy Crazy couldn't get home. I told you he would be sailing, but Jockey Sorensen didn't let out the wraps in time. Those of you who went across the board, however, participated in a $19.10 place mutuel, but that $33 we were going to get on the win end wouldn't have been half bad. BILL.

First race—Flag Time looks best of the group contesting in this short sprint. Will have T. King, the hustling apprentice, aboard. The price will not be much, but I can't overlook his ability. Line of Fire showed an encouraging effort recently and may make it tough for the top fellow. Meeting Place for the show.

Second race—Reigh Rose scampered home for me once, but was disqualified. Has the necessary speed and I believe better handling will see this one paying off tomorrow. Pass and Blue Foam for the other awards. Clocker Mike left me Blue Foam as a good thing.

Third race—I'm trying to slip over another one at a price here. I mean Gay Blade. I expect this one to be overlooked in the betting and I understand tomorrow is the day. Wax and Mad Bull to take care of the others.

Fifth race—The Pelican belongs on top of this group. Has all his speed and faces his best distance. March Step is a long shot with a chance to take first money. Zorana deserves consideration.

Sixth race—Gracias is my Three X special for today. The cold dope doesn't put this one in front, but I have my own reasons for believing we will be on an alive horse. Mynah and Tuffy G for the other awards.

Virginia-Breds Show Way at Horse Sale

Nine Yearlings Brought In $22,900; Son of Teddy Tops at $11,500.

BOYCE, Va., Aug. 22 (Spl.).—For the first time in the history of thoroughbred sales at the Saratoga Springs, N. Y., auction block, Kentucky bowed to Virginia insofar as the highest price paid for a yearling colt was concerned.

A check-up of the sales of the noted auction place today indicated that a yearling by the imported Teddy, owned by Kenneth N. Gilpin, owner of the Scaleby stud here, brought the top price of the sales, $11,500. The yearling, the first offering of Teddy, was out of Superstitious by Superman.

Lively bidding for Teddy's colt resulted when the Fasig-Tipton Co., representing Gilpin, placed the yearling on the auction block. Started at $500, the bidding developed into a battle between Dick McMann, representing the Calumet Farms of Warren Wright, of Chicago, and Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia sportsman. Calumet Farms obtained the yearling at $11,500.

Mr. Gilpin, who returned from Saratoga today, declared that his yearling sale had the highest average figure of this year's lot, records disclosed, and that as a result of the sale Virginia took the honor of heading the list of States insofar as yearling price averages were concerned.

Gilpin offered nine yearlings in the consignment of which the Teddy colt was a member. The entire lot brought an average of $2,544, or aggregate of $22,900. Individual sales of the lot, together with purchasers, follow:

Chestnut colt by Teddy out of All Gone by Last Coin, purchased by P. M. Walker, $2,200; chestnut filly by Teddy out of Fairy Land by Somme Kiss, E. R. Bradley, $1,100; bay colt by Teddy out of Knight's Star, by Bright Knight, E. Hall, $1,000; bay filly by Teddy out of Lady Emmeline by King James, E. R. Pike, $1,500; chestnut filly by Teddy out of Simmy by Neilglow, J. H. Whitney, $700; bay colt by Trojan out of Sister Superior by Superman, E. Trueman, $400; chestnut colt by Teddy out of Summelia by Sun Briar, Calumet Farm, $3,500; bay colt by Teddy out of Superstitious by Superman, Calumet Farm, $11,500, and chestnut filly by Man o' War out of Suppress by Superman, $1,000.

Johnny Bowen announced last night that the local welterweight will challenge Furr for a return bout, if the latter restores himself to the good graces of the Boxing Commission, which is considering punishment for him for running out of a match with Bob Wilson. FURFIBER, well placed from the start, was in close quarters when attempting to move between the leaders after rounding the far turn, gained clear sailing in the stretch, wore down ON OUR WAY and, hard ridden, lasted to hold BLIND PRAISE safe. The latter worked his way up gradually and closed with good courage through the closing furlong. HOGANS FOX, slow to settle into his best stride, saved ground at the last turn and closed willingly in the stretch run. ON OUR WAY had good speed, but weakened under pressure in the final furlongs. BLUE BUBBLE was never a factor. TRACKER had good speed, was going along easily out in front when he suddenly bore out badly after leaving the back stretch.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:02. Off at 3:03½. Winner, J. D. Mikell's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—FRED ALMY, $19.00, $7.20, $4.40; MOANE KEALA, $3.70, $3.10; CANTERSINE, $3.10.

FRED ALMY, slow to settle into his best stride, moved up stoutly in the last three furlongs, came to outside of the leaders in the stretch and, closing gamely, won going away. MOANE KEALA, prominently placed from the beginning, made a determined effort when reaching the stretch, but was unable to keep pace through the closing furlong. CANTERSINE had speed from the start, disposed of STAROGAN and, despite holding on well, was unequal to the task of staving off the closing bid of the first two. DUNLILT, outstanding colt in the inside having the back stretch and held on with good courage to the close. STAROGAN had good speed, assumed a slight lead approaching the stretch, but faltered from her early efforts through the last three-sixteenths. CABOUSE weakened in the drive after racing on the outside from the start. GAY BANNER faltered after a brief display of early speed.

THIRD RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:30. Off at 3:30½. Winner, R. Curran's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HIGH SOCKS, $29.10, $15.00, $8.80; BOY CRAZY, $19.10, $10.10; ERVAST, $5.40.

HIGH SOCKS, a prominent factor from the start, shook off MAYVITE in the run through the back stretch, opened up a good lead and, continuing gamely to the end, was never seriously threatened, winning with speed in reserve. BOY CRAZY, under restraint for the first half mile, moved up stoutly leaving the back stretch and closed with good energy in the stretch run. ERVAST, under slight reserve early, closed determinedly. ZEMBLA, a trailer early, closed a big gap. CALOME lacked speed and, though making up some ground in the last five-sixteenths, was never able to gain a menacing position. DOORKEEPER weakened after setting a slight pace for a half mile. MAYVITE weakened from her early efforts and stopped badly in the closing quarter mile.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:59. Off at 4:00. Winner, Mrs. B. F. Christmas' ch. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—COLD SPILL, $13.50, $4.70, $3.10; STEPBROTHER, $4.00, $3.20; BANNERS FLYING, $3.40.

COLD SPILL, under steadying restraint while following within striking distance of the pace, moved up stoutly in the closing quarter mile, came to the outside in the stretch, wore down STEPBROTHER and drew out steadily all the last sixteenth. STEPBROTHER, under slight reserve while racing the pace, went to the front after leaving the back stretch, but was unable to maintain his advantage under punishment through the stretch. BANNERS FLYING, outpaced early, came with a belated rush through the stretch. RED BADGE had good speed, but weakened in the last three-sixteenths. LUCK IN stopped badly after displaying early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 4:31½. Off at 4:32. Winner, P. M. Pike's br. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—MAMAS CHOICE, $12.10, $5.90, $3.90; BEDIGHT, $3.90, $3.10; CARISBROOKE, $3.30.

MAMAS CHOICE, outrun during the early stages, moved up fast in the closing quarter mile, came with a rush on the outside in the last furlong and was up in the last few strides. BEDIGHT had speed from the start, was much used in racing with CARISBROOKE and had nothing left with which the meet the final challenge. CARISBROOKE finished well all the way, but faltered slightly in the closing stages. CUTIE FACE never could reach the leaders. CHARACTER saved ground at the stretch turn, but was never able to seriously threaten. HIR TEN trailed throughout.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $2,500 added. The Lafayette Claiming Stakes. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 5:01. Off at 5:02. Two-dollar mutuels paid—KHORASAN, $8.40, $5.20, $4.30; †CARRY OVER, $7.50, $3.40; ICLEVES, $9.40.

KHORASAN, under slight restraint for the first five furlongs, began moving up gradually thereafter, wore down CARRY OVER in the stretch and outlasted him at the finish. The latter forced the early pace, took command midway of the turn and fought it out courageously to the end. CLEVES, slow to begin, worked his way up steadily and closed with a rush through the stretch. ELF LOCK, outpaced for the first five furlongs, closed willingly thereafter. RED JOHN, slow to begin, came with good speed through the stretch. FLYING CADET, restrained early, faltered when called upon. BIG BEAU, restrained early, dropped back steadily after passing the five-furlongs pole. PIETY had early speed, but weakened when the real racing began. SPEEDY SKIPPY tired. GAILLARDIA, hard hustled to get to the front, displayed good speed for the first six furlongs, but flattened out shortly thereafter.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won handily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:33½. Off at 5:34½. Winner, E. Craisie's br. f. (4), by Macaw—Beaming Trained by J. Hammerschmitt. Value to winner, $750; second, $150; third, $75; fourth, $25. Time, 0:24 2-5, 0:49, 1:14, 1:39 2-5, 1:59 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DARKLING, $12.30, $5.20, $3.20; FABIUS, $3.30, $2.50; BRASS MONKEY, $2.90.

DARKLING worked his way up steadily, went to the front when VESTED POWER began tiring and held FABIUS safe through the stretch. The latter, reserved early, made a determined effort through the last three-sixteenths, but was not good enough. BRASS MONKEY, a trailer until the closing quarter mile, closed gamely thereafter, but was unable to reach the first two. GABBO, well placed from the outset and under slight restraint, weakened in the closing three furlongs. VESTED POWER had good speed, but faltered in the last three furlongs. GRAND ACRE faltered when the real racing began.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 6:07½. Off at 6:13. Winner, L. Cherman's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LIGHT BREEZE, $32.00, $15.60, $8.00; BOOCAP, $8.00, $4.80; BROWN WISDOM, $4.30.

LIGHT BREEZE, under steadying restraint for the first half mile, obtained clear sailing on the inside when making her effort, came to the outside in the closing lane and held BOOCAP safe at the finish. BOOCAP, well placed, was in close quarters leaving the back stretch, eased back and came again through the closing three-sixteenths. BROWN WISDOM took command in the run to the first turn, was rated along in front, but weakened in the last quarter mile. HOW HIGH, a prominent factor, tired after going the first six furlongs. PERIODICAL, under reserve early, moved up steadily on the outside down the backstretch, but was unable to improve his position. TEENIE R. tired. JIM ORMONT, unruly at the post, was never a factor.

MAMAS CHOICE, outrun during the early stages, moved up fast in the closing quarter mile, came with a rush on the outside in the last furlong and was up in the last few strides. BEDIGHT had speed from the start, was much used in racing with CARISBROOKE and had nothing left with which the meet the final challenge. CARISBROOKE finished well all the way, but faltered slightly in the closing stages. CUTIE FACE never could reach the leaders. CHARACTER saved ground at the stretch turn, but was never able to seriously threaten. HIR TEN trailed throughout.

Heurichs Nose Out Pig 'n' Whistle Nine, 7-6, to Win Industrial League Title

Brown Saves Game for Brewers

Holds Pigs Runless in 9th While Relieving With Bases Filled.

IN the third and deciding game of the play-off for the championship of the Industrial League, carrying with it the right to represent that circuit in the series of week-day league champions of The Post Association, Heurich Brewers nosed out Hugh Waldrop's Pig 'n' Whistle nine, 7 to 6. The largest crowd of the season witnessed the game on the Ellipse and was kept on edge throughout.

Walter Beall, veteran sandlotter and former member of the New York Yankee pitching staff, and Ev Russell were the starting pitchers, but neither was in the box at the finish. Beall went out in the seventh and Russell pitched good ball until the ninth, when he weakened.

Brown to the Rescue.

With one out and three men on and only one run needed by the Barbecue boys to tie the game, Reggie Brown was sent in to save the bacon for the Brewers. And Reggie was equal to the occasion, for the first batter popped weakly to the catcher and the next one grounded out to Huck Stahl at short for the final out of the game.

Again yesterday Dick Knight, speedy left fielder, stole the show from a defensive angle when, with three Pig runners on the bases in the fourth inning, he came through with a spectacular catch, rivaling his effort of the day before. He followed with a brilliant throw to Shelton at second to complete a side-retiring double play and put an end to a threatening Pig 'n' Whistle rally.

Bill Shelton and Johnny Fenlon led the Heurich batting attack with three safeties, while Gill was best with the stick for Pig 'n' Whistle.

Mike Norton Quits C.U. Football Team

Reserve Back of '33 to Be Missed by Cardinals.

Catholic University football stock sagged yesterday when it was learned that Mike Norton, reserve back of the 1933 eleven and a virtual certainty for a regular position this season, will not be available. Norton has decided to abandon football rather than resign from a position in the Government he secured at the beginning of the summer vacation. He will, however, continue in school, attending night classes.

Because of his speed and heft, Coach Dutch Bergman had counted on Norton as one of his regular half backs this season. The lad showed up well in spring training, excelling in forward passing. He also was a hurdler with the Cardinal track squad.

Through Edgren's Eyes

What Will Encore Be?

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—The Messrs. Ross and McLarnin, I see, are scheduled to refight their brawl of last spring on the same spot and over the same route. There are a lot of people who think that they could take the motion pictures of the last fight out to the Madison Square Garden bowl in Astoria and just run them off again and save a lot of money, but both parties seem to think otherwise.

Ross thinks he will knock McLarnin out this time and McLarnin is convinced that he will beat Ross. This is fortunate, else it might be very difficult to get anybody to go out and see the return match. I do not get very heated over return matches as a usual thing, but this one interests me because I don't think that Ross won the last one by a wide margin, if he won it at all, even though I picked him to win. What prize fighting he did that night was very brisk, high-class fighting, but I don't think he did enough of it.

Screwy Judging at Fight.

Looking up my score sheet for that fight, I find that I gave McLarnin six rounds, Ross seven and scored two as even. I also note that if McLarnin hadn't lost several rounds for accidental low punches which were scored against him, he would have been the winner on rounds, though whether he would have received the decision is something else again.

There was a lot of screwy judging on that fight anyway. One judge gave Ross only one round and the referee was just as bad, because he gave McLarnin only one round. It is hard to figure out how any two officials looking at the same fight could be quite so far apart.

In retrospect, I recall now that Ross fought exactly the same kind of fight against McLarnin that Baer did against Carnera, only he knocked Jimmy down but once and that was after he himself had been on the floor from a left to the jaw. Also he didn't stop McLarnin or hand him anywhere near the beating that Baer gave Carnera. Except for those few moments when Baer was crashing Primo to the canvas or playing "paddy beat the drum" on his midsection, Carnera was winning all the time in their fight, because all Baer did was wheel and back away and take left jabs to the face, all of which score as points. It is very hard for me to score winning rounds for fighters who back pedal.

McLarnin Aggressor.

Checking back through the files, I note that with but one or two exceptions, Ross backed away from McLarnin for the first two minutes every round, while McLarnin attacked and piled up points with a stabbing left. In the last minute, Ross would cut loose with a withering blast of fighting, but only rarely, as I recall, sufficient to overcome McLarnin's two-minute lead. Inasmuch as McLarnin was champion and Ross challenger, I felt that McLarnin should have been scored higher for being aggressive and chasing Ross. I am still waiting to see a champion stop dead in his pursuit of a back-away counter-fighting challenger and say: "All right, sonny; you want my title, Come and get it."

If Mcarnin chases Ross in this second fight, then he is a bigger sucker than anyone has a right to suspect him to be. He didn't get anywhere with the tactic the first time and he will probably be bright enough not to fight the same losing fight twice, or to think that he can win this time with a system that lost the last time.

Story May Be Different.

If Ross, then, has to carry the fight to him, there may be an entirely different story written and I would like to examine both parties a little more closely before I come up with my bum steer on the winner. I note that right after the fight I did a piece in which I said: "I am convinced that the next time Ross fights McLarnin he will knock him out before the twelfth round." I would like a little breather on that one.

Sherwood Wins Playground Title

Bell Is Pitching Star of 2-to-1 Duel.

Sherwood Playground representatives yesterday defeated Rosedale Playground in a thrilling pitchers' battle, 2-1, to take the championship of the Eastern Division in the hard-ball league. Walter Bell, Sherwood moundsman, pitched air-tight ball, allowing Rosedale only two hits.

Sherwood and Hayes, neighboring Northeast playgrounds, in preparation for the city track playground which is to be held on Wednesday, August 29, held a friendly dual meet yesterday which saw Sherwood add further to its laurels when they counted 115 points to 70 for Hayes. Myer Serota, of Sherwood, copped individual scoring honors by winning every unlimited event. Paul Babbington was outstanding for Hayes.

Seating Arrangements Completed for Regatta

Several hundred chairs will be placed along the waterfront to be sold as grandstand seats for this year's President's Cup Regatta, it was announced today by Curtis Hodges, chairman of the land reviewing committee. As the regatta begins September 20 and ends September 23, the seats will be offered for daily sale.

These seats, which offer the only land vantage point from which an unobstructed view of the races may be had, will cost 40 cents for each day. Tickets will be placed on sale within a few days at the American Automobile Association, Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue.

The Chotsie, owned by Mrs. Florence Burnham, of Wilmington, Del., yesterday became the latest entry in the regatta races. The Chotsie was the winner of the 1933 Albany-to-New York race. It also clinched the Eastern championship 225 cubic inch hydroplane event at Havre de Grace this year.

Miss Van Wie Lands Western by 10 Strokes

Chicago, Aug. 22 (AP).—Virginia Van Wie, America's reigning queen of the fairways, ran away with the Women's Western 72-Hole Golf Derby over her home course at Beverly Country Club today.

Making only her second start in tournament competition since she captured the National title for the second successive time at Exmoor last August, Miss Van Wie dominated her field so completely today that she won by 10 strokes over her closest rival, Mrs. Opal S. Hill, of Kansas City, with a total of 323 shots, or 7 over par for the distance.

Lucile Robinson, the golfing school marm from Des Moines, Iowa, who upset the champion in the finals of the Western last year, landed in third place, 1 blow behind Mrs. Hill with a 334.

Dixie Amateur Golf Body Planned

Billy Howell, Richmond Ace, Seeks Members; D. C. Golf News.

BILLY HOWELL, Richmond's golfing ace, will be doing missionary work around Washington golf clubs in the next few days with the idea of enrolling new members for the Southern Amateur Golf Association, which will hold its annual championship next year in Richmond.

A member of the executive board of the association, Howell, was responsible for bringing the championship to the James River course of the Country Club of Virginia, of which he is a member. Fred Haas, jr., the tall young Birmingham ace, Western junior titleholder, won this year's Southern in Birmingham.

Howell broached the idea to Roger Peacock, executive manager at Indian Spring Country Club, and other prominent members of nearby District clubs, and all liked it very much. The dues are $15 a year, and the Richmond ace will attempt to persuade Columbia, Chevy Chase, Congressional, Indian Spring, Manor, Beaver Dam, Army and Navy, and Washington Golf and Country Club to join. Should they join, such stars as Peacock, Gene Vinson, Harry Pitt, Maury Nee, Billy Dettweiler, Martin F. McCarthy, John Shorey, Jimmy Drain, Miller B. Stevinson, Hickman Greene, Tommy Webb, Dick Lunn, Frank Roesch, and Levi Yoder would participate. Vinson holds a membership in a club in Mississippi, and participates annually in the tournament. He won the medal a few years ago.

The Southern amateur will be played early next June, and changes in the course already have been made, according to Howell.

Most of the Washington clubs belong to the Maryland State Golf Association and the District, as well.

A number of Washington golfers is planning to enter the Fairacre Challenge Cup championship at the Cascades course of the Hot Springs Golf and Tennis Club September 1, 2 and 3. Dr. William C. Barr, of Washington, is a member of the tournament executive committee.

The event has been held for the past two years. It was won last year by George L. Craig, jr., of Pittsburgh. Alex Knapp, of Baltimore; W. B. McCullough, jr., Philadelphia; Tom Somerville, Charlottesville, and Fay Ingalls, of the host club, are among the former champions.

There will be 18 holes of medal play and two days of match play. Five flights have been planned. Entries should be filed accompanied by $3 entry fee with Fred Gleim, jr., Hot Springs professional.

The fourth of a series of "field days" for junior members of private clubs will be held this morning at 10 o'clock at the Georgetown Prep School course. It will be an 18-hole handicap tournament. Youngsters between the ages of 12 and 21 are eligible to enter. Before the tournament Frank Emmet, diretcor of golf at Georgetown Prep, will lead a discussion on the rules of golf. Billy Dettweiler, Maury Nee, Merrell Whittlesey, Jack Keele, Harvey Johnson and other junior stars will participate.

A return match between the Hillendale Club of Baltimore and Indian Spring will be played Sunday at Hillendale. A team of 50 men and 20 women will make the trip. Indian Spring routed Hillendale in their last engagement, 24 to 3. George Diffenbaugh and Roger Peacock will compose the No. 1 team meeting the Hillendale duo of Carrol MacMaster and Ernie Caldwell.

Favored Pairs Advance in Doubles

Bell-Mangin Win Over Mako-Budge; Stoefen and Lott Survive.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 22 (AP).—California's "kid" sensation makers of tennis, husky Gene Mako and slim Don Budge, went down before a barrage of craft and experience in the National doubles championship today, but in bowing to the pressure of quarter-final play they gave the veterans, Berkeley Bell and Gregory Mangin, the greatest battle the Easterners have ever encountered.

Only after calling on all their net guile could the new Yorker and his Newark (N. J.) partner, seeded fourth in the American listings, come through in five bristling sets to conquer the Pacific Coast 19-year-olds in 2 hours and 15 minutes of furious battling.

They rallied, after being two sets down, and struggling for every shot, marched into the semifinals by scores of 4—6, 5—7, 6—3, 6—2, 6—4.

It was the superior experience that finally told on the Californians, who yesterday knocked the seedings into a cocket hat by eliminating the English greats, Fred Perry and Frank Wilde.

Favored Pairs Advance.

Meantime, the two combinations favored to battle for the crown in Saturday's final round—Lester Stoefen and George Lott, the defending champions, and Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, former titlists and Davis Cup players—continued their crushing stride through quarter-final brackets.

Only the United States' two singles aces in Davis Cup play, Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, of New York, ran into difficulty in the form of the surviving invaders from overseas, Vernon Kirby, of South Africa, and Roderick Menzel, of Czechoslovakia.

After the New Yorkers and the invaders had battled through two grueling sets, with honors all even, play was called until tomorrow because of the lateness of the hour. Shields and Wood had won the opener, 6—3, and then bowed in a long distance affair at 11—13.

Stoefen and Lott, Wimbledon champions and America's only point winners in this year's Davis Cup challenge round with England, battered Carl Fischer, former intercollegiate titleholder from Woodbury, N. J., and William Lingelbach, Philadelphia, into submission in fast time and straight sets by scores of 6—2, 6—4, 6—2.

Seeded Players Win.

Three other National doubles tournaments, the mixed doubles, veterans, and father and son, went through elimination rounds today, with the seeded list in each withstanding virtually every challenge.

Stoefen and Elizabeth Ryan, of England, top seeded Americans in the mixed doubles play, and Perry and his countrywoman, Betty Nuthall, ranking foreigners, marched to straight set victory. The Americans conquered Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Brubans, of Union City, N. J., 6—4, 7—5, while the Britons swept to a 6—2, 6—3 conquest over the Philadelphians, Rowland Evans and Mrs. W. Sargent.

A feature of the day was the remarkable rally of Mangin and Bell after staring at virtual defeat at the end of the first two sets of their battle with Mako and the red-haired Budge.

Mangin's net play, somewhat ragged at the start, tightened appreciably and his sharp volleying drilled the Californians' defenses. They were behind at 2—1 in the third set before their improvement really told, but at that point they broke through Mako's service and took command of the situation.

Mangin battered over a corner placement for the deciding shot in the set.

In addition to completion of the Shields-Wood, Kirby-Menzel engagement tomorrow, the tourney also will see the semifinal struggle between Lott and Stoefen, and Bell and Mangin. The remaining first round mixed doubles matches also are on the card.

Stocks Capture New Peaks in Heavy Trading

Speculative Spirit Rules Market; Sales Jump to 1,291,410 Shares.

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Stocks monopolized speculative attention today with a strong advance that carried the market into new high ground on the recovery from the late July decline.

In the heaviest trading since August 9, with turnover of 1,291,410 shares compared with 579,010 yesterday, many gains of 1 to 4 points were recorded for active issues.

Variety of factors, including a favorable technical position, were cited as contributing to a bullish temper in speculative quarters. Inflation sentiment still abounded in some places. But there was nothing of outstanding moment in the day's news to account for the rise.

Rumors on Dollar.

Wall street lent ear to rumors that the dollar might be revalued further to 50 per cent of its old gold parity, the full extent of depreciation allowed in the inflationary powers voted the Administration by Congress last year. The present level is 59.06 per cent of the old parity.

It was argued in some quarters such a move would dissipate much of the current uncertainty concerning the dollar, since it would mean the end of devaluation, and in consequence would help the Government bond market.

Stocks Capture Favor.

Stocks elbowed commodities out of speculative favor. Following yesterday's upturn, demand for stocks expanded substantially after the opening and for a time the ticker was swamped by a rush of buying orders. Later the market quieted, but finished around best levels of the day.

Traders became more active on the buying side as railroad shares fell in line with industrials in pushing through the tops of the recent narrow range.

The advance was general, with rails, farm implements and mail-order, chemical and other industrial groups forming the shock troops of the offensive.

On Gaining List.

Among issues showing gains of 2 to 4 points were Santa Fe, Atlantic Coast Line, J. I. Case, Columbian Carbon, W. T. Grant, Ingersoll Rand, Johns Manville, Lehman Corporation, Owens Illinois Glass, Spiegel-May-Stern, Union Pacific and Underwood-Elliott-Fisher.

General Motors, American Telephone, Montgomery Ward, International Harvester, New York Central and American Tobacco B moved up about a point or so.

The Iron Age, estimating steel operations had fallen back to 21 per cent of capacity, the low for the year, saw no visible signs of an upturn, although some improvement was expected after Labor Day.

Other major barometers of industrial activity portrayed a steady course. Electric power use last week, according to the Edison Electric Institute, increased 0.9 per cent over the preceding week and was 1.5 per cent higher than in the corresponding 1933 period.

Robey's Review

Finance Economics Business

Estimates of an Increase of Farm Income This Year Not Necessarily Inconsistent With Earlier Reports of Heavy Losses.

By Ralph West Robey.

It would be difficult for anything to be more superficially confusing than the reports during the last few weeks on the financial position of farmers. Not long ago, it will be recalled, it was stated that the loss from the drought would be about $1,500,000,000. Then, as President Roosevelt was returning across the continent, the assistant to Mr. Hopkins reported to him that it would be $5,000,000,000. In the last few days the whole tone has changed. Now we are told that the income of the farmers this year will be between 20 and 30 per cent greater than last year. This means an increase of roughly one billion dollars.

That both the $5,000,000,000 loss and the $1,000,000,000 increase might be true, is obvious. A host of factors enters to make this possible. In the first place the loss is figured on the capital depreciation of the agricultural areas, due to the drought. The gain refers only to income, not to the capital position of the farmers.

Farmers in Non-Drought Areas Will Be Well Off.

A second factor which might help to make both of the figures correct is that in those places where the drought has not struck the farmers will be materially better off than last year. Combine with this the fact that the Administration is pouring hundreds upon hundreds of billions of dollars into the drought area and one gets the possibility of a larger income than in 1933 although losses have been appalling.

Explaining the two figures, however, does not justify the use to which they are being put. The $5,000,000,000 figure has been played up as a justification for the heavy expenditures that the Government is making. The net gain in income is being used in an attempt to bolster confidence in the business outlook for this fall. When the figures are employed in this way they become, in effect, contradictions.

Income Is the Factor That Determines Possible Suffering.

In other words, the basis upon which the Government may be justified in pouring huge amounts of money into the drought areas is not the capital losses suffered by farmers, but the contraction of income. It is only the latter that will determine whether the farmers will suffer during the next few months. In fact, even a contraction of income in itself does not warrant the Government giving away money. It is only when the contraction goes to the point, as it does in much of the drought area, where the farmer can not live without outside aid that the Government should step in. The mere fact that the reduction of income in certain areas will be large, therefore, does not alone serve as a criterion for the amount that the Government should spend.

Capital losses, it should be evident, have no relation to the problem. They are important because of the effect they have on the ability of farmers to live in the future. The Government never is justified in offsetting them. The $5,000,000,000 figure, accordingly, should be relegated to the same class of worthless statistics as the contraction in the capital value of an industrial organization.

Bond Market Moves Higher; Federals Sag

Secondary Issues Provide Strength; Sales Total $14,580,000.

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Strength of secondary corporation issues gave the bond market a show of strength today, although the enthusiasm for listed loans was considerably restrained because of the sagging tendencies displayed by U. S. Government securities.

The Federal section was again the most active, registering a turnover of some $14,580,000, par value, and bringing total transfers up to $23,463,000 from $13,672,000 yesterday.

It was the largest aggregate since August 9. The Standard Statistics Co. average for 60 domestic corporate bonds advanced three-tenths of a point to 84.1.

Low-Priced Liens.

Lower-priced liens apparently reflected another brisk recovery in stocks. There was little news that might have had an important bearing on the market as a whole. At the same time, fresh inflationary murmurings were said to have caused some nervousness in the Government department as well as in prime investment issues generally.

Federal Farm Mortgage 3s and Home Loan 3s and 4s yielded ten thirty-seconds to fourteen thirty-seconds of a point and reached new low ground since their issuance. Treasury issues declined three thirty-seconds to eight thirty-seconds of a point in heavy trading despite intermittent rallies which were attributed, in some quarters, partly to Administrative support.

The rails were again the best of the corporate divisions. Gains of 1 to 2 or more points were held by some loans of Baltimore & Ohio, Chicago Great Western, St. Paul, Chicago & North Western, Denver & Rio Grande, Erie, International Great Northern, M. K. T., Missouri Pacific, N. Y. Central, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Southern Pacific, Southern, Texas & Pacific and Wabash. Bonds of Santa Fe, Union Pacific and Chesapeake Corporation were barely steady.

Paramount Issues Popular.

Paramount issues were again popular with advances of 2 or more points. Firmness was also shown by various liens of American Water Works, Goodyear, Hudson Coal, International Telephone, Postal Telegraph, Utilities Power & Light, Vanadium and Warner Bros.

Bonds of National Dairy, National Steel, Dodge Bros., New England Telephone and American Telephone were inclined to lag.

Curb's Prices Work Higher In Active Sales

Oils, Metals and Specialties Advance; Trading Rises to 181,000 Shares.

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—The upward surge in prices continued on the Curb Exchange today, and the list closed with gains of fractions to 2 or more points. Volume broadened on the upturn.

Advances were pronounced among oils, metals and specialties. Utilities improved, while alcohols were firm. The main buying flurry came in the second hour, but following a lull quotations again moved upward, in the final dealings.

A. O. Smith rose 4½ points, while Singer Manufacturing and Parker Rustproof gained about 3 each. Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, one of the few rail representatives in the list, was up 1. Aluminum Co. of America, Gulf Oil, Hiram Walker, Newmont, New Jersey Zinc, Swift International, U. S. Foil B, Technicolor, Glen Alden Coal, International Petroleum, Humble Oil and Celluloid Corporation all finished around 1 to 2 higher. Electric Bond & Share, Standard Oil of Indiana, Distillers Corporation-Seagrams and Lake Shore were improved.

Union Pacific Income Drops To $1,520,631

Nickel Plate Road Halts Losses With Net of $309,865.

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Net railway operating income of the Union Pacific Railroad in July totaled $1,520,631 compared with $1,826,330 in the same month last year. In the first 7 months net operating income was $7,754,472 against $7,092,942 in the same period a year ago.

New York, Chicago & St. Louis (Nickel Plate) Railroad, for the seven months ended July 31 had net income of $309,865 after charges, equivalent to 86 cents a share on the 6 per cent preferred stock, on which there is an accumulation of unpaid dividends. For the same period last year there was a net loss of $939,963. July deficit after charges was $103,476 against surplus of $237,084 in July, 1933.

Directors of the Lake Shore Mines have declared an extra dividend of 50 cents a share on the capital stock, payable September 15 to stock of record September 1. On June 15 a similar extra was ordered.

Net loss of the American-Hawaiian Steamship Co. in the first six months totaled $198,185 after charges, depreciation and expenses incident to the longshoremen's strike, but before Federal taxes, compared with profit of $63,580 in the first half of 1933.

Pet Milk Co. and subsidiaries report for the June quarter net profit of $263,762 after charges, equal, after preferred dividends, to 54 cents a common share. This compares with profit of $543,277, or $1.17 a share in the same quarter last year.

Earnings applicable to dividends of the National Power & Light Co. in the 12 months ended June 30 amounted to $6,815,078, equal, after preferred dividend requirements, to 94 cents a share on the common stock. In the preceding year the company showed earnings applicable to the common equal to $1.05 a share.

Pan - American Petroleum & Transport Co. reports for the quarter ended June 30 consolidated net income of $512,419, equivalent to three cents a share on the common stock, compared with net loss of $611,511 in the June quarter last year.

Net earnings of the Molybdenum Corporation of America for the six months ended June 30, 1934, after taxes and depreciation but before depletion amounted to $217,053.49, as against $36,955.50 for the comparative period of 1933.

Washington Business Angles

By J. R. Brackett.
(Associated Press.)

The code authority of the investment bankers probably will be an important factor in whatever action the securities and exchange commission may take to supervise over-the-counter markets.

The commission has found no definite approach to this problem yet, but it appears likely that the investment bankers with their code—characterized by officials as a fine job—may draw some of the task.

While no statistics are available to show the importance of these markets, one official believes they constitute 60 per cent of the security business done in New York. Of course, when that business is broken down, a large part of it is found to consist of small issues that may not be subject to regulation on the ground they are not interstate or not worth regulating simply because they are small.

The investment bankers' code is one of the most stringent regulatory documents under the NRA. It offers investment bankers an opportunity of registering with the code authority, and when subscribing to this registration the bankers must trade most carefully.

"Investment banker" is to some extent a misnomer, because many so classified are so small as not to come in the same classification with houses such as J. P. Morgan & Co.

At present this market is virtually unregulated, with the result that investors have no information whatsoever of profits which dealers may receive, or of the value of their offerings.

Gossip of New York Markets

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—An optimistic British economist advises his readers to "keep a curve of demand deposits."

"Its increase," he says, "can spell only one thing—a boom." This is one of the conclusions of Maj. L. L. B. Angas in his pamphlet, "The Coming American Boom."

This advice was hardly needed by financial students in Wall street, for they learned long ago the importance of banking statistics in measuring the country's economic condition, and especially of demand deposits as an index of monetary supply.

But leading observers in the financial community are generally distrustful of the "quantity theory" of money. They do not, as a rule, accept the idea that prices, and thereby prosperity, can be restored by increasing the volume of money and credit available for use.

Demand deposits, more than any other form of bank claims, are equivalent in all practical respects to currency, notes or coins. Time deposits, withdrawal only after several months' notice, represent accumulated capital rather than a medium of exchange.

The demand deposits of all banks in the country are published only occasionally, but Federal Reserve member banks in 91 leading cities, holding something more than half of all demand deposits, had a total of $12,827,000,000 on August 15.

Since the Treasury started borrowing on a large scale last January, demand deposits of these banks have gained almost $2,000,000,000. They stand nearly $2,500,000,000 above a year ago. This rise is traceable to two chief factors, gold imports after revaluation of the dollar, and Treasury expenditures of borrowed funds.

A curve of demand deposits, such as Maj. Angas suggests, would show a rapid increase from March, 1933, when the low was touched, until July of that year, a temporary but sharp fall in the following several weeks, a gradual but steady gain from mid-August, 1933, until January, 1934, and a fast accumulation from the latter date forward.

The factor of the velocity is used by most economists who see a relationship between money and business activity to explain why this growth of deposits has not been accompanied by a comparable rise in business activity in recent months.

Few financial students dare risk a dogmatic statement as to which comes first, an increase in business activity or an increase in the volume and velocity of money.

Trade Trends.

(Associated Press.)

Hides—Additional sales in the Chicago market include 13,000 hides, including light native cows, at 7½ cents a pound, unchanged from the previous sale.

Dyestuffs—Manufacturers are reported showing more interest in forward shipments. Coal tar products are firm and featured by an improved movement of benzol.

Floor covering—There is a larger attendance of buyers in the primary market, and actual buying is on a more active scale according to trade quarters. The current interest is spread over a wide variety of carpets and rugs.

Muslins—Business has picked up in the bleached muslin market, although current volume is somewhat below that attained early in the month. Prices on most constructions have firmed from the low levels of July.

Commodity prices—Although future values tended to weaken in many instances, cash markets maintained their strong position and for the third successive week the weekly compilation of wholesale prices prepared by Dun & Bradstreet showed advances in excess of declines. The agency's daily commodity index also bettered its position during the week, advancing to 119.31 on August 20.

Wool goods purchases continued light in all divisions. Silk mills increased curtailment. Markets for silk goods were slow. Rayon yarns were quiet. Burlaps were quiet.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Aug. 22 (AP).—Steel and iron prices remain unchanged, according to the Iron Age composites. Scrap steel holds at $10.17 a gross ton, pig iron at $17.90 a ton and finished steel at 2.124 cents a pound.

Corporate bond maturities during September, reports the Standard Statistics Co., will total $42,148,100, against $65,754,000 in August. The number of bonds and notes making up the September total is 137, of which five amount to $1,000,000 or more.

Chain store sales in July were of the same dollar volume as in that month of 1933, according to reports to the New York Federal Reserve Bank. This followed several months of year-to-year increases. The less favorable showing for July, according to the reserve bank, was influenced by the fact that July of last year was the first month in two years in which increased sales were reported.

Holders of the state of Santa Catharina, Brazil, external 8 per cent bonds, due in 1947, which went into default in 1929, have been notified by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., as special agent, that pursuant to the recent governmental decree, 17½ per cent of the face amount of the August 1, 1934, coupons will be paid in cash. It is stated that such payments, if accepted, will constitute payment in full of such coupons.

Dun's insolvency index for the first half of August was 54.2, which was the lowest shown for any month this year. The corresponding figure for August, 1933, was 89.1, and for the first half of that month in 1921 it was 160.1, the highest ever recorded for August.

Planting Indian Cotton Is Down 7.5 Per Cent

New York, Aug. 22.—A cable from Bombay to the New York Cotton Exchange Service states that the area planted to cotton in India to August 1 this year, as reported by the Indian government, was 12,985,000 acres as compared with 14,031,000 acres planted to August 1 last year, a reduction of 7.5 per cent.

Cotton Sinks $1.25 Under Liquidation

October Closes at 13.15 as General Market Falls 22 to 25 Points.

After selling off from 13.46 to 13.32 during the early trading, December rallied to 13.40 on covering or trade and commission house buying but later broke to 13.30 and closed at 13.31, with the general market finishing barely steady at net declines of 22 to 25 points.

The Government announcement of a 12-cent loan offer to cotton farmers instead of 13 cents as had been talked of recently in some quarters, appeared to be a disappointment to buyers of yesterday and this combined with private reports of rains in north Texas and Oklahoma, occasioned considerable liquidation.

Opens With Declines.

The market opened easy at a decline of 6 to 13 points and sold about 21 to 23 points net lower during the morning. Offerings were absorbed by covering of trade buying on a scale down and the market steadied up during the middle of the day in sympathy with the firmness of the stock market and bullish features in the weekly weather report.

Trading became quiet on recoveries of 6 to 9 points, however, and prices broke again, reaching the lowest levels in the late trading under renewed liquidation and Southern selling.

October sold off to 13.15 and May to 13.55, with closing quotations at or within a point of the lowest for the day.

The rains reported in Oklahoma were considered beneficial, although some doubt was expressed as to whether they were in time to do much good.

Exports today, 4,896, making 174,013 so far this season. Port receipts, 8,715. U. S. port stocks, 2,389,235.

Cottonseed Oil.

Bleachable cottonseed oil was firm today with prices again making new high levels on further covering and increased investment buying, promoted by the strength of lard and a strong hog market. Final prices were 6 to 9 points net higher. Sales, 194 contracts. Bleachable spot nominal; September closed 7.08; October, 7.12; December, 7.29; January, 7.36; March, 7.50.

Life Policy Sales Increased in 1934

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 22.—At the close of the first seven months of 1934 ordinary life insurance sales in the United States were 15 per cent ahead of those for the same period last year. The gain in sales was generally experienced, for in every section of the country the volume of new business exceeded that of last year. Only one State, South Dakota, fell below the 1933 figure. The largest gains for the year were made in the mountain section, which showed a 30 per cent increase. The West South Central States were 26 per cent ahead of last year and the South Atlantic group 25 per cent larger than last year.

Those statistics are issued by the Life Insurance Sales Research Bureau at Hartford, Conn., which compiles figures based on the experience of companies having in force 90 per cent of the total legal reserve ordinary life insurance outstanding in the country.

For the month of July 55 per cent of the reporting companies showed increased sales. For the country as a whole the July total was 6 per cent larger than for last July. All sections of the country, except the New England States and the East South Central section, showed gains in July over July, 1933.

Cotton Supply In Nation Cut Below Average

Total Stocks for Season Put at 17,013,000 Bales in July.

New York, Aug. 22.—The indicated supply of all cottons in the United States for the current season is much smaller than in any recent season, and is about 1,000,000 bales below the average supply prior to the beginning of the depression, according to a report issued today by the New York Cotton Exchange Service.

A distribution by consumption and exports during this season of the same size as last season's distribution would bring the stock of cotton in the United States at the end of next July down to a total much smaller than in any recent season, while a distribution of the same size as the predepression average would result in a smaller than normal end-season stock.

"The indicated domestic supply of all cottons for this season is 17,013,000 bales," says the Exchange Service. "It is computed by adding the August cotton crop estimate, converted to running bales on the basis of average bale weights in the past five years, to the stock of all growths in the United States on August 1, and making allowance for imports and city crop accumulations. The indicated supply for this season compares with 21,039,000 bales last year, 22,757,000 two seasons ago, 23,360,000 three seasons ago, and 18,481,000 four seasons ago. In the five seasons from 1924-25 through 1928-29, the domestic supply averaged 18,082,000 bales.

"The distribution of cotton in the United States last season by exports, consumption and destruction was 13,293,000 bales, comprised of 7,552,000 bales exported; 5,701,000 bales consumed, and 40,000 bales destroyed. If the distribution this season is no larger than last season, the stock of all kinds of cotton in the United States at the end of this season would be 3,720,000 bales, as compared with 7,746,000 at the end of last season; and, if the distribution is equal to the predepression average of 15,329,000 bales, the end-season stock would total 1,684,000 bales."

Strange as It Seems —By John Hix

The month was originally the time it took for the moon to revolve once around the earth. This designation, called the lunar month, however, varies according to what reckoning is used to determine a revolution. If you take the position of the moon in relation to the stars, and calculate the time elapsing before the moon returns to this same position, you have the sidereal month. From new moon to new moon is called the synodic month. The nodical or draconic month, the anomalistic month, and the tropical month are units of time used in astronomy. The first is the mean time of revolution, from ascending node to ascending node; the second is from perigee to perigee, and the third from equinox to equinox.

The solar month is the twelfth part of the solar year. The calendar month, of course, varies with the month. In common law the month was deemed to be 28 days unless otherwise expressed, but by statute the month is considered a calendar month unless otherwise expressed. In business a month is usually considered 30 days.

Steeplechasing is considered one of the more hazardous of sports. Few riders hope to follow it long without an occasional tumble. Yet George Stevens, famous English rider, never fell in his whole career—although he won the grand national five times, a record never equaled. But strange as it seems, Stevens was killed when an ordinary hack horse he was riding bolted, throwing him and fracturing his skull.

Tomorrow—The Oldest Peace Treaty.

Fire Destroys Flooring On Tugboat "Tindeco"

The flames were extinguished before arrival of the Firefighter, harbor fireboat. Some concern was felt when the blaze was first discovered because many oil companies have storage tanks near the dock. Damage was estimated at $800.

Walt Mason, Himself

Evidence.

The murderer has little chance of going free, we know, for science makes such great advance the truth is bound to show. The murderer, that dead game sport, stands up with sickly grin, and there are scientists in court to show where he heads in. The learned professor, Dr. Mudd, looks over all the clues, identifies a drop of blood found on the slayer's shoes. The reckless slayer left a hair within the victim's shed, and now the learned professors swear it's from that slayer's head. They found a button in the yard, a sleeve-link by the well, and science, ever on its guard, now has strange tales to tell. "These things belong to that cheap skate who now is being tried;" he feels the pressure then of fate, which can not be denied. The learned professors take his hat and analyze its dust, and they identify his gat, to cause him much disgust. They prove he wore a certain shirt upon the fateful day, and everything that's bound to hurt, the learned professors say. The murderer has just one chance, it seems, of getting clear; he knows that many jurors glance at science with a sneer. The expert witness makes them tired, they think his work is vain; and learning, which should be admired, gives them a dark green pain. There is no doubt the slayer slew, his guilt is manifest, but jurors hate the expert crew, and science they detest. So now and then a man goes free who should be jailed for keeps, or swinging from the gallows tree, while stricken justice weeps.

Tax Men Probe Gas Bootleg Charge Today

District, Maryland and Virginia Officials to Air Violations.

Charges of wholesale gasoline bootlegging and tax evasion by Washington dealers will be laid before a conference of District, Maryland and Virginia tax officials today.

The decision to call in the tax-collection agencies was reached late yesterday at a meeting of the District Petroleum Code Committee called to consider peace terms for settlement of the Capital's 8-day-old price war.

According to L. S. Scott, committee chairman, the committee heard charges that gasoline was being bootlegged into the District from Maryland and Virginia tax free and either was being sold here without payment of tax or reshipped into either of the States for sale.

Complete Probe Promised.

Sufficient evidence of tax law violation was disclosed at the meeting, Scott said, to warrant a hearing by tax officials of the three jurisdictions concerned. Both States and the District, he said, have been invited to send representatives to a meeting with members of the code committee at which time, he said, "a complete and thorough investigation of the situation will be asked, to be followed by prosecution wherever officials feel they have sufficient evidence."

It was not known last night who would represent Virginia and Maryland at the conference. C. A. Russell, gasoline tax collector for the District, was expected to represent the Capital.

Until the investigations have been completed and proceedings instituted against violators, the code committee decided to take no further action toward settlement of the price war.

To Adhere to 12-Cent Price.

Major distributors and their independent dealers will maintain the present 12-cent price indefinitely, it was said, pending the outcome of whatever investigation may be made.

Tax avoidance by bootlegging was charged by Scott to the so-called third-grade independents, which opened hostilities by cutting prices first to 12 and then to 10 cents.

He cited the cases of Russell F. Barrett, operator of a station in the 2000 block M street northwest, charged in a warrant issued by Assistant Corporation Counsel Edward W. Thomas with tax delinquency for June in the amount of $646, and "one or two others."

Barrett, from his home last night, said the warrant had not been served upon him. The warrant was turned over to Third Precinct police, in whose district Barrett's station is located.

From the leaders of the independents came categorical denials of implication in bootlegging activities.

Attorney Defends Barrett.

In behalf of Barrett, the following statement was issued by his attorney, J. Chase McKenzie:

"My client on the morning of August 21 tendered payment of gasoline tax for the month of June to the cashier of the collector's office. Payment was accepted by the cashier, but was later refused by his superior. Mr. Barrett again tendered payment the next morning, but that too was refused. These payments were tendered before Mr. Barrett had any knowledge of any proceedings being instituted against him and as a matter of fact the first payment was tendered before any warrant had been issued.

"Mr. Barrett had dealt with the tax collector's office for a period of about three years and tax payments by him have amounted as high as $1,800 a month and he has never been behind more than a few days. I have been informed that other gasoline dealers owing thousands of dollars are in arrears, yet have not been placed in the light before the public as has Mr. Barrett. Mr. Barrett is no fly-by-night operator, but is the employer of about 25 men, has owned his home in the District of Columbia for a number of years and has raised a large family here."

It was revealed that Barrett unwittingly had sold gasoline Monday night for 8 cents a gallon, an all-time low for the District. While Barrett was home, some one telephoned his station and ordered, in a voice mimicking his, a subordinate to lower the price to 8 cents. This was done and the station sold out its supply at that price. Barrett failed to learn of what happened until he visited the station the next morning.

Boy, 16, Dying; Police in 2 States Hunt His Parents

Baltimore, Aug. 22 (Spl.).—While Paul Holliday, 16, lies critically ill in the infirmary of St. Mary's Industrial School here, police are searching through two States for his parents.

The last address given for the boy's mother, Mrs. Stella Holliday, was on Creston street, Cumberland. Mail addressed to her there has been returned, Brother Fidelis, superintendent of the school, said. He believes she may be in Pennsylvania.

Young Holliday was sent to the school from Allegany County about six years ago, to remain until he was 21. He has had no visitors, Brother Fidelis said.

Several days ago he became ill, and yesterday his ailment was diagnosed as pneumonia. Today his temperature had soared to 107 degrees, and physicians say he has one chance in ten to recover. He was employed in the school print shop, and was an athletic star at the same institution that turned out baseball's brightest star, Babe Ruth.

Holt May Split Party in State

Fight Over Chairmanship Pushed by Candidate for U. S. Senate.

Charleston, W. Va., Aug. 22 (AP).—A determined fight for control of the Democratic party machinery and a possible break from it was indicated yesterday as young Rush D. Holt prepared to go to Clarksburg for a meeting of the State executive committee.

Holt, 29, the party's nominee for United States Senator, has demanded that Robert G. Kelly, of Charleston, resign as chairman.

Kelly has declined to discuss the matter, but there is no indication that he intends to quit.

The nominee also has refused to say for publication what his plans are, but close friends declare he is so determined to have another chairman that if the committee does not elect another one he will form a separate organization.

Kelly's friends say his position is that "he refuses to surrender control of the committee to Van A. Bittner," contending that Bittner is not a regular Democrat and may be a Republican after the present campaign.

Bittner, head of the United Mine Workers in West Virginia, indorsed Holt for the nomination and campaigned for him throughout the State before the primary. Yesterday was the first time his name was mentioned publicly in connection with the fight over the chairmanship.

Boarder Accuses Murder Defendant

Says Eva Coo Remarked "Easy" Way to Attack.

Cooperstown, N. Y., Aug. 22 (AP). Eva Coo was accused from the witness stand in her murder trial today of having remarked before Harry Wright was killed by an automobile "how easy it would be to go up behind him and knock him down with a car."

The State is seeking to prove Wright was hit on the head with a Mallet and then run over several times by a car and killed, near an abandoned house on Crumhorn Mountain.
